"In an era of human depersonalization, the importance of small, face-to-face encounters between Christians becomes doubly necessary, and the Christian Action Movement offers a framework within which this can take place in the midst of large parishes and large social groupings. The centrality of the Bible and the concern to reach out from the group into the larger community furnish points of contact with non-Catholics that could give the Movement great ecumenical significance."

ROBERT McAFEE BROWN, Professor of Religion, Stanford University

"However, the true worth of the handbook lies beneath the surface; — in its universality and adaptability. The plan for regular meetings of prayer, discussion and planning, and the regional organization structure, can be used by any Christian group hoping to find a way of vitalizing the apostolic vocation of its members. Alumni groups, wondering what to do between fund-raising campaigns, third orders concerned with adapting an old spirit to the needs of the Church today, professional men and women concerned about their witness as Christians: all will find here a theology and social psychology, plainly set forth, and a modern technique by which their meetings will be made interesting and fruitful."

"The real challenge and excitement in my career is helping businessmen solve their problems."

says Hal Gatewood, Jr., C.L.U., Ohio State '55

"From the day I went with Mass Mutual 8 years ago, I started becoming an integral part of our professional and business community.

"You see, a life insurance man just naturally becomes involved with his client's future. Many of my clients began describing their business problems along with their family needs. As a result I had to increase my technical studies. This broader field was tremendously interesting and exciting to me. Soon I found myself specializing in the application of life insurance to all phases of business, including pension and profit-sharing plans.

"One of the things that appeals to me most about being in business for myself is this opportunity to specialize exactly where I find the greatest challenge and stimulation.

"Of course, it helps a lot to be associated with a Company that has an elite reputation, over $3 billion in assets and is more than a century old. Mass Mutual has a large number of representatives throughout the United States who work much as I do. And believe me, this Company is equipped to provide us with appropriate back-up . . .

both contracts and services to meet the demands of our growing market."

If you think Hal Gatewood's career offers the kind of challenge and excitement you would enjoy . . . why not write our president for more details? He is: Charles H. Schaaff, Mass Mutual, Springfield, Mass. Your letter could be the start of a very worthwhile career.

Christian Action

A Personal Apostolate

by

REV. EDWARD S. STANTON, S.J., '38

FOR some years now all the faithful have been saying public prayers for vocations. Most have thought only of priestly and religious vocations. I think the day has come when we need to offer prayers for lay vocations, that more Catholic laymen may develop a real sense of responsibility to undertake the Church's mission in the modern world.

And we are not talking here about the vocation to "give good example," helpful though this is. It was Pius XI who said, "At the present time the personal apostolate is not enough, if indeed it ever was enough." Rather there is question here of the involvement of Catholic laymen in the Church's organized apostolate. Only through such an approach can Catholic laymen gain access to, and bring a Christian influence to bear on the highly complex and sophisticated structures of contemporary society.

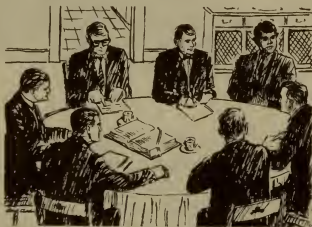

THE world has undergone many revolutions—the industrial and cybernetic, to mention only two—quite independently of the Church's influence. And now the Church is trying to "catch up" on this world. That is why the tone of Vatican Council II was essentially pastoral; the Council concerned itself more with practical than with theoretical problems; its longest and, in the estimation of many, its most significant document is entitled: "A Pastoral Constitution on the Church in the Modern World."

This Council can be considered either to have simply come and gone or to have ended—only in the sense that its closing marked the opening of a new era. The latter position is supported by all those who have the time to read the conciliar texts. If the Church is to become relevant to the modern world this will be brought about when more of the laity join the clergy in assuming co-responsibility for the Church's ministry to the world. In fact, if laymen do not assume their proper role, which Christ Himself assigned them at the time of their baptism, all the other efforts of the Church will prove futile. This role is clearly set forth in the Council's Decree on the Apostolate of the Laity.

Until recently laymen may have thought they had an option to become involved in the Church's mission or simply "to save their own souls." Now this is no longer possible, for, as this document clearly indicates, "The Christian vocation by its very nature is a vocation to the apostolate. No part of the structure of a living body is merely passive but has a share in the functions as well as the life of the body . . . and that member who fails to make his proper contribution to the development of the Church must be said to be useful neither to the Church nor to himself."

For several centuries the clergy has been considered the active element in the Church and laymen, for the most part, have been passive. This is an unfortunate distinction.

It has led to tensions and misunderstandings especially in those parts of the world where laymen have acquired a superior education. As every priest knows, in rectories across the country the question is often raised, "Where are all those well-trained Catholic college graduates?" On the other hand, when alert and concerned Catholic laymen get together they frequently express their resentment that too many priests evince a paternalistic attitude in their regard. All too few priests, they say, recognize laymen's competencies. Too few priests show a readiness to play their small but very significant part in carrying out tasks which laymen initiate. Priests could help laymen carry out their tasks in the temporal order by offering them more spiritual direction, intellectual guidance and apostolic formation. More and more thoughtful laymen are looking for postgraduate training in Catholic thinking and living—training that is adapted to professional people, many of whom are products of sixteen years of Catholic schooling.

THIS problem is multi-faceted; it has a long history; it will not be solved easily; nor will any effort be made in this brief article to present a "pat" solution. But since the author has spent the greater part of the past ten years working with small teams of priests and laymen, he has been asked to describe (even prescribe) one formula which has proved quite successful.

What follows is a sketchy account of the Christian Action Movement. In the Boston area alone over one hundred men have accepted an invitation to join one of these small Christian communities. For the most part, they are college and university graduates. The groups collectively comprise the Christian Action Movement. This Movement is now beginning to spread in other parts of the country.

They gather each week for meetings in a private home. The meeting never lasts longer than an hour and a quarter. It begins on time and ends on time. Some groups meet in the evening; some after Mass on Saturday or Sunday morning. Men who have all sorts of commitments to their families, and professions readily submit themselves to the tight discipline of the weekly meeting format.

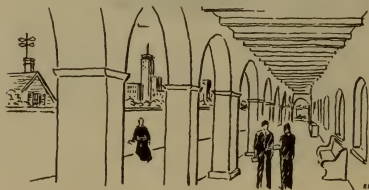

There are three parts to the meeting: 1) a group meditation on some passage from the Bible; 2) "routine action;" and 3) the development of a specific apostolate to society.

Each one comes to the meeting, having prepared himself to share with the others those insights into the Christian message that he has gained from his own private reflections and from the latest commentaries on the Bible. Attentively listening to, and openly discussing God's Word these men are formed as His People. While at the beginning this attempt at intimate sharing is apt to be slightly awkward, after three or four meetings they become aware of the fraternal atmosphere that surrounds them as they respond to the lessons the Lord Jesus is teaching His Church today.

Towards the end of this communal prayer each one proposes a resolution for the following week. Then they jointly settle on that resolution which they feel will best enable them to live the Christian life more fully.

Where the first part of the meeting is for the members' spiritual formation, the second part, "routine action," is directed toward their intellectual growth.

The members report on the activities and the trends that are developing in their professional societies or trade associations. They call to one another's attention worthwhile books and articles from the secular and religious press and, in general, try to keep abreast of current issues that affect the life of ecclesial, civic, state and national societies. "Totally immersed in the secular world and its activities," as the Decree on the Apostolate of the Laity says they should be, they realize the need of constant intellectual stimulation even harassment, in the process. They were surprised, for instance, to discover how many otherwise well-educated Catholics have responded, not creatively but negatively, to this problem whose solution will be arrived at only when more informed and dedicated Christians become directly and personally engaged in serving God's poor.

In every apostolic undertaking Christian Action men choose that area of the apostolate where they think their talents can best serve the public interest. In approaching each problem they follow the SEE-JUDGE-ACT method which Pope John highly recommended in his encyclical, Mater et Magistra.

Members of Christian Action groups hail from Columbia, Harvard, Stanford, Georgetown, Holy Cross, as well as from Boston College. They are doctors, lawyers, teachers, physicists, business and tradesmen. The spiritual advisers of the groups are Augustinians, Capuchins, Carmelites, diocesan priests, and Jesuits.

Each group enjoys an autonomy of its own. Yet each is bound to the others notably by way of a monthly Newsletter, a monthly evening of recollection, and an annual retreat. The members of each group gradually introduce themselves to a daily set of spiritual exercises which is set forth in the Christian Action handbook. Perfect fulfillment of the demands of this program does not come easily. But they all are making serious efforts to live richer Christian lives. In fact, they are members of their groups precisely because they became dissatisfied with their previously sporadic efforts to grow in the ways of Christian holiness and because they were not completely content with many other fraternal and religious organizations to which they did, or did not, belong.

What they are finding in this new movement is perhaps a new sense of their lay vocation, particularly in the Church's mission to the modern world. In that area the college graduate's concern, competence and courage are indispensable. And the fields for harvest are much whiter than most people dare realize.

in order that they may serve "as a yeast in the secular order" and "permeate it with the Christian spirit."

The third part of the meeting serves to train them, by involving them, in apostolic activities. Let me give a few examples. A few months ago, the Massachusetts Supreme Court rendered a decision which provides for a more equitable distribution of property-tax responsibilities. From this point forward, thousands of home owners throughout the State, especially those with young children, will be able to provide somewhat more adequately for their children's education—because the men in one Christian Action group spent, literally, hundreds of hours in arousing public opinion in their town and in presenting their case to the courts.

Another group recently set up a non-profit corporation, bought 66 acres of valuable property near a lake and are well on their way to obtain from the U.S. Government $880,000 for the construction of an extended care unit. This they are doing under clause 221 D3 of the Federal Housing Act. Instead of having federal funds for the "great society" administered by gray-coated agents of Uncle Sam, these men want to provide for the sick and the aged warmer and more personal service in a Christian nursing home.

ANOTHER group recognized that the racial problems of Roxbury are the responsibility of all citizens in metropolitan Boston, and set up a Fair Housing Committee in their suburb. They faced considerable embarrassment, and

by

THOMAS H. O'CONNOR, '49

Chairman, History Department

THE right of dissent is a real and universal problem which is as old as mankind itself—a problem with which Sophocles concerned himself centuries ago in his Antigone—the question of the right of the individual citizen to publicly express his own ideas of right and wrong even though they may be in conflict with the prevailing rule of law under which he lives. This has been an integral part of the struggle to maintain a working democracy during the history of the United States and, as current newspapers and magazines clearly indicate, it has taken on even greater significance at the present time.

In the light of the fact that much of the history of the American people appears to be the history of public dissent—starting with the American Revolution itself, and going on Revolution itself, and going on to such developments as the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions, the doctrine of Nullification, the Populist Movement, the Progressive Movement, and so many other challenges and protests against the existing order—one may ask what there is about the current wave of dissent which has so greatly alarmed so many people and which has raised the spectre of national disintegration. Is there anything which might be considered especially unique or distinctive about the present protest movements, or are they such another up-dated version of past complaints?

There appear to be at least two major factors which distinguish current developments as distinctive—one of which is concerned with the nature of the movement itself, and the other which concerns the circumstances in which this movement is taking place:

First, the most striking characteristic about the current movement of dissent is what might be called its "universality"—in time, in place, and in theory. Geographically, for example, as a result of the modern mass media of communication—radio, television, motion pictures, newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, and mimeograph machines—this is something which has not been confined to any one region, state, or campus, but something which has affected the entire nation all the way from Berkeley to Boston. We have had, in the past, numerous examples of states and regions which have publicly opposed the policies of the national government, particularly in terms of foreign policy, war, and peace. The firm opposition of the New England states to the War of 1812, and the violent dissent of these same New England states against the War with Mexico in 1846 may be seen as early examples of reaction against national policy which was essentially isolated and disorganized except within local or regional limits. And one might, for another example, make an interesting comparison between the limited regional success of the Abolition movement of the 19th century, and the national success of the 20th century Civil Rights movement through the use of modern communication techniques.

ANOTHER feature of the "universality" of the current wave of dissent is the fact that it is no longer limited to the personal and highly individualized leadership of such figures as John Randolph, William Lloyd Garrison, John C. Calhoun, Henry David Thoreau, Robert LaFollette, Henry Wallace, or any of those other figures who have been clearly classified as "the voice" of this particular movement or that. At the present time it is almost impossible to isolate a single leader or a typically unique personality among the hundreds and thousands who have joined their voices and their talents toward working for the success of their particular objective. At least in its organizational form, a type of anonymity has appeared to have replaced the highly personalized leadership which characterized so many reform movements of the past.

And a third way in which this "universality" can be seen is in the broad range of activities in which the participants engage. Atomic energy, the hydrogen bomb, school lunches, insecticides, fluoridation, Vietnam, Cuba, the draft, civil rights, fair housing, urban renewal, depressed areas—there is virtually no major area of political, economic, or social concern which has not come under the vocal criticism of the dissenters. Perhaps not since the reform movements of the mid-19th century has the nation seen such outpouring of reform activity which encompassed so many and so varied aspects of American life and society.

The other outstanding feature which is of historical interest, is the fact that this wave of reform activity and public dissent, so universal in its appearance and application, is taking place at a time in our national history when—for good or for bad—many of the traditional and external restraints which have served to minimize, jeopardize, or paralyze such movements in the past are no longer operative.

In recent years it has become evident that judicial restraints, administrative regulations, parental restrictions, social deterrents, and political sanctions have gradually diminished to the point where some social critics question whether they are functioning at all. At a time when freedom in the land has become almost total, this means that in the absence of external forces of direction, supervision, and regulation, the greatest degree of responsibility will rest with the individual American himself. In the freedom of a democracy which makes it possible for all kinds of thoughts, ideas, and publications to be broadcast widely—virtually without let or without hindrance—the future responsibility of the democracy will lie in the necessity of every one of its citizens having the intelligence and the training to separate the true from the false, to distinguish sense from nonsense.

In short, what we refer to as the "Public Welfare" will depend, more than ever before, in the reasoning power, the sound judgment, and the maturity of its future citizens. Not just a few—not an aristocratic elite, not a favored oligarchy—but all the citizens who are prepared to assume a responsible role in the future of their nation. There will be some, I am sure, who never emerge from the welter of conflicting ideas to formulate responsible values and ideals and to take a meaningful part in the life of America. These will forever remain our intellectual Peter Pans eternally humming the strains of "I don't want to grow up. I don't want to grow up!" But there will be a far greater percentage of tomorrow's citizens, having gone through the long and sometimes painful processes of grappling with ideas, committing themselves to certain programs, and taking reasonable issue with others who will emerge as more intelligent and responsible citizens who are even more committed to the ideals of America. This will not be in accordance with any formula which has been imposed upon them from without, but in keeping with their own patient and thoughtful views of what has already been accomplished under the Democratic system and yet fully aware of the numerous challenges which lie ahead of them.

The prospect is both frightening and exhilarating—and the role of the teacher, the educator, and the student is more decisive than ever before in our history. As what might be termed as the "official" interpreters of morals, values, and policies experience a decline in their traditional authority, much greater emphasis must be placed not only upon the development of factual knowledge and the accumulation of data, but upon those critical faculties which are necessary for deriving from the facts and the data valid judgments, thoughtful interpretations, and meaningful values for the present and for the future.

IN considering how much latitude should be given to those who expressed open disapproval of governmental policies and constitutional opinions, Thomas Jefferson said: "If there be any among us who would wish to dissolve this Union or to change its republican forms, let them stand undisturbed as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it." Here, eloquently and succinctly expressed, is emphasized not merely the right of free expression and dissent, but of the equally serious duty and responsibility of citizens to come to grips with these ideas intelligently, reasonably, and tolerantly. The factor of reasonable tolerance, too, was a note which Jefferson greatly emphasized in speaking of the importance of open controversy in the United States. While party labels and organizational badges may be necessary as a means of dramatizing political differences or ideological beliefs, Jefferson urged that such labels should not obscure the overriding fact that most Americans have the same good end in view. We must not become so emotionally involved in dissent and disagreement that we begin to accuse our neighbor of treason or treachery just because he holds opinions which differ from our own. "Let us reflect," said Jefferson, "that having banished from our land that religious intolerance under which mankind so long bled and suffered, we have yet gained little if we countenance a political intolerance as despotic, as wicked, and capable of as bitter and bloody persecutions." "Let us restore to social intercourse," he pleaded, "that harmony and affection without which liberty and even life itself are but dreary things."

It is not without serious reflection that Jefferson added the elements of harmony and affection to the virtues of reason and tolerance in dealing with those ideas and movements with which we may not be in agreement and which, in fact, we may feel are at serious odds with the prevailing climate of opinion. In many ways this sense of harmony and this spirit of affection may be even more essential in overcoming those personal and psychological obstacles to true dialogue and understanding than the actual facts themselves.

Few of us, I am sure, would be at all hesitant in demanding freedom of dissent for those ideas which we ourselves favor and support—ideas which we are fully convinced are true and good and lasting. But are we equally enthusiastic in supporting the individual rights and personal liberties of those who advocate ideas with which we may not agree?

Most spokesmen for dissent—at least viewed in historical perspective—are not always lovable people—in fact, very often they are not really very likable. Concentrating fanatically upon their reforms, sincerely and conscientiously absorbed in their programs, utterly devoid of humor or light-heartedness where their cherished principles are concerned, they are much more apt to repel than to attract. As a result, it becomes much easier for us all to dismiss or to disregard various conflicting views and ideas—not so much because of any intrinsic merits or demerits in the ideas themselves but because of the personal attitudes and characteristics of those who are presenting them. This is not only in conflict with harmony and affection, but immediately rules out anything like a rational and objective approach toward ideas which may be of significant value.

WE must be prepared to analyze and discuss conflicting ideologies on their own merits, rather than to dismiss them out of hand, sight unseen, because they have been offered by persons whom we regard as crackpots, cranks, beatniks, rebels, or agitators. It may well be that an idea turns out to be as useless as the one who presents it, but this should be determined after a careful examination of the idea—and not predetermined by the color of a person's skin or the length of a person's haircut.

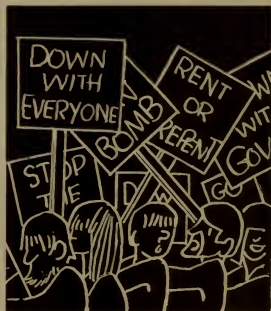

And if dissent should reach the point where its methods and manifestations disturb the public order, seriously endanger the rights of others, or contravenes the existing laws, it should be left to the legally constituted authorities to determine the offense and to mete out the punishment. The public interest is never served by the type of hoodlumism, vigilante tactics, or mob violence which denies in fact the very concept of civilized authority which it claims to defend.

If a nation insists on absolute freedom without sufficient responsibility, or demands complete liberty without adequate guarantees of authority, the result might well be unbridled chaos and anarchy. If, on the other hand, a government sets national authority above the rights of its people, or dictates controls at the expense of personal liberties, the result will inevitably be a dictatorship. The pages of history are filled with the stories of nations which have either ended up in the straight-jacket of totalitarianism or which have floundered aimlessly in the limbo of lost republics, drifting from one hopeless revolution to another.

A true democratic government is an extremely difficult goal to achieve, and an even more difficult goal to maintain, because it involves a constant balance between the forces of liberty and authority—freedom and responsibility. Democracy is not something which a nation obtains and then keeps in some kind of petrified form forever after. On the contrary, democracy is something which a nation achieves and which future generations work and struggle to maintain. It requires not only eternal vigilance, but continual care, serious study, frequent change, and occasional reform. A democracy is the attempt by the people to attain that delicate balance between liberty and authority, so that liberty will never become license and authority will never become dictatorship.

There are, obviously, certain factors which determine how the delicate and ever-changing balance between freedom and responsibility is to be maintained, but one of the most important of these elements will have to be the spirit of the people themselves. If the people of a nation can develop a vigorous national pride without becoming bombastic, if they can maintain a strong pride in their accomplishments without becoming overbearing, if they preserve a deep sense of their heritage without becoming antiquarian, if they can invoke constructive criticism without losing sight of the years of toil and sacrifice which went into the attainment of what they have already achieved—then the tolerant spirit and responsible intelligence of such a people may well be one of the most important factors in keeping liberty and authority in their proper relationship.

EDUCATION:

A COMMITMENT TO ALL

by IRENE M. McINNIS

WE cannot all live in cities, yet nearly all seemed determined to do so," said Horace Greeley.

With this statement he brought into focus the challenge of the twentieth century. The shift from an agrarian to an industrial society has made nearly eighty percent of our population city dwellers. Air pollution, traffic congestion, over crowded and substandard housing, unemployment, delinquency, and inadequate school programs are only a few of the elements that an urban Pandora has bequeathed us.

This summer Boston College has taken the first steps toward the development of a department of urban education. This beginning took the form of two new programs — Upward Bound and the National Teacher Corps. Both programs operated on an intensive basis on campus throughout the summer session and Upward Bound will continue through the academic year.

It is generally acknowledged that the inner city schools are in trouble. Throughout the country, the economically advantaged have migrated to the suburbs leaving our cities with a dwindling tax base to support city schools. Often the school enrollment increases despite the decrease in adult population because remaining families have more children. Thus the schools are left with the dilemma of more students and less money to spend per student.

The principals and teachers are the people who really feel the brunt of these problems while carrying the burden of the daily school operation. As they attempt to provide quality education for each child who comes to school, they face deteriorating buildings, shortages in teaching materials, inadequate funds for audio-visual equipment, and a limited number of teachers applying each year because of the desirable teaching conditions in the suburban schools.

THIS situation is not unique to the public schools. Inner city pastors find that the amount of money collected on Sunday morning is far less than they need to operate the type of school program their children require. Frequently home problems which affect the child's classroom achievement cannot be dealt with as there are no funds for obtaining social workers and psychologists to work with the family and child. Boston's Operation Headstart found thirty percent of the three to five-year-olds enrolled had some emotional or physical illness serious enough to warrant immediate attention. Cases of tuberculosis, congenital heart disease, and severe psychosis were identified and treated.

What begins to become apparent as one compares the urban and suburban school is a growing gap in the quality of education offered. Even the most dedicated ad competent urban school teacher has difficulty competing with the suburban school program with the higher per pupil expenditures. A national awareness of the long term consequences of this gap has brought about legislation at both the federal and state levels, designed to alleviate the pressures on the urban school. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the Higher Education Act and the Economic Opportunity Act are examples of federal legislation and the Harrington-Willis Act is an example of state legislation here in Massachusetts.

Much has been written about the National Teacher Corps, since separate proposals were introduced by Senators Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin. Basically, they both proposed the establishment of a corps of persons who would enter rural and urban school systems, extending school services and lending their talents and energies to the education of the disadvantaged child. From the start it was a controversial piece of legislation. Many congressmen raised questions about the issues of federal vs. local control of education, implicit in the act. Even after the act passed, it appeared that the Congress would not allow the Corps to become an actuality as they withheld funds for operation. At last funding for the Corps became available and university centers for training corpsmen opened throughout the country.

ON the Boston College Campus, twenty-eight corpsmen attended a pre-service training program this summer. It is anticipated that they will go into the Lowell and Boston Public Schools in September, continuing their training through an in-service program. They will enter these school systems in teams, consisting of one experienced teacher and interns, who are college graduates but have no formal training in education. The corpsmen will not supplant the teachers but will allow the school to reach out in directions that were previously impossible. During school hours, they will conduct remedial reading, math and science programs. After school they will develop and conduct school-related programs in the community.

The director and assistant director of the program, Dr. William Griffin and Dr. Mary Griffin, said there were three components to the pre-service phase of the program. First the corpsmen participated in an intensive two week seminar on inner city problems. Also they experienced life in an urban area by working closely with people who know the community. Finally, they attended an intensive training workshop on the use of teaching materials which have been constructed for the inner city child.

The corpsmen represent a range of talent and experience. They hail from such places as California, Texas, Pennsylvania, New York, North Carolina and most of the New England states. Some are recent college graduates and others not so recent. The one characteristic they hold in common is a commitment to education; particularly to urban education where they see a great need. Their community experiences this summer have taken them to the Alliance of Cambridge Settlement Houses, the Roxbury Multi-Service Center, the North End Community Action Program, the South End Youth Opportunity Center, the Elizabeth Peabody House and Playroom 81 for four weeks and to the many summer programs conducted by the Boston Public Schools for an additional two weeks. To watch one of the corpsmen assist a teacher demonstrating how to determine the mass of a cube to a class, is to gain insight into the valuable contribution these dedicated people will make to the school systems and children they serve.

While the National Teacher Corps brought teachers and interns on campus for a ten week pre-service training program, Upward Bound brought tenth and eleventh grade students on campus for an eight week education program. The director of this program, Ulvess Grant Shelton, has stated that Upward Bound, "... was designed to make admission to institutions of higher learning possible for its participants. The basic qualifications for success in college center around the ability to be articulate, to possess a basic fund of knowledge, to be emotionally balanced and to have a high level of aspiration. We feel that this project contributes to the development of these qualifications in its attempt to enhance both motivation and capacity for learning."

To achieve these goals, ninety students were selected principally from Boston English High School, Charleston High School, Boston Technical High School, and St. Joseph Academy for Girls. These students are capable young men and women who either felt they would never be accepted into a college or who lacked some of the skills required for college admission. To make college admission a reality for these students, Boston College is committed to accept qualified students from the Upward Bound Project. In the event that there remains a lingering academic deficiency that might militate against the usual college admission, a pre-college admission tutorial program will be initiated. Following admission a candidate may take part in the tutorial program currently carried on by students in the Honors Program and Sodality.

The theme of the campus summer program was "The Complexities of Urban Society." This was an interesting topic for the students who have grown up in city neighborhoods. Thus their remedial reading, speech, English, math and social science classes had greater relevance since they were based upon real experiences. The content of the courses was further bolstered by field trips to hospitals, social service agencies, libraries and museums.

There was a wide range of reading ability represented in the student groups but through the use of EDL controlled readers, tachistoscopes, developmental reading materials and the Boston Globe for current issues, the students have been improving their reading rate and comprehension. Mr. Morton Weinert, the Chairman of the Boston Latin School Math Department brought fresh insights into the world of modern math; introducing negative and positive integers, the number line and a geometry with the terms point, line and plane undefined. It was not an easy summer for these students.

To avoid an "all work and no play" program, recreational activities were made possible through art and music classes, campus sports facilities, and programs conducted for families and friends.

An example of a program conducted for and by Upward Bound students was the Field Day held on campus July 30th. Upward Bound Students from Tufts, Harvard and Boston University joined the Boston College group for an afternoon and evening of sports, speeches, and socializing. National Upward Bound Director, Richard T. Frost and Executive Secretary to Sargent Shriver, James M. Harkless were among the many visiting parents and friends.

ALL in all, it was a good summer for these students but what happens in the Fall when they return to their high schools? Will they now desire to go on to college and expend greater effort and time to attain the better grades needed for college entrance? These are questions that cannot be answered for the moment. Thirty tutors will be assisting these students throughout the school year and it is hoped that this tutorial program will help them over some of the rough spots.

In conclusion it is worthwhile recalling that education is a relatively new field which began with the contributions made in the early 1900's. Education with the assistance of the other social sciences has come to recognize the gifted, the mentally retarded, the emotionally disturbed, the disadvantaged, the academically talented, the delinquent, the creative, and a number of other groups which may be found in any classroom; each requiring special educational assistance if they are to be taught all they can master. Equal opportunity cannot mean that everyone gets the same regimen, some need more help to reach levels readily achieved by others. Although we have believed that an educated populace is essential to the functioning of a democracy, we are only just beginning to understand the energies and resources which must be harnessed to make this great national experiment work. The experiment of 'education for all' may become this country's real contribution to world civilization.

But to whom does the task of this experiment fall? Keppel has said, "Education is too important to be left solely to the educators." If he means that all of us as parents or as citizens must be concerned about the education of tomorrow's adults, then he is right. However, in the last analysis the responsibility for educational change rests with the educators. In an age where it takes years to master a field and a life time of reading to keep up with new developments in that field, we do well to remain competent in our own specialty. At best we can look with understanding and support to educators and be critical only if it becomes apparent that they are not accepting the challenges of the age. Boston College has accepted the challenge of urban education; a challenge which must be met if our children are to continue to live in and cope with a world which has become and will continue to become increasingly complex. A complex world is also a world where people are greatly dependent upon one another and in such an interdependent world we cannot afford second-class citizenship.

Education must truly be a commitment to all.

SOCIAL SCIENCES:

A Community Responsibility

IN THE lobby of the Department of Commerce at Washington is an electric chart-counter which illustrates the dramatic growth of our national population.

A child is born every $7\frac{1}{2}$ seconds, some one dies every 17 seconds, an immigrant enters the country every $1\frac{1}{2}$ minutes. A net gain of one is indicated by a white light in the center of the chart which flashes inexorably every 12 seconds 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

At the top center of the exhibit an electrically operated counter, like the mileage meter of an automobile, presents a cumulative total which shows the estimated total population of the United States at a given moment and acts as a "scoreboard" enabling the viewer to watch the rate of growth.

As of September 1 this year the number had passed 197,000,000—an increase of nearly 18,000,000 since the last national census hardly six years ago. The total will easily reach 200,000,000 before the end of 1967, some 50,000,000 more than in 1950.

Such a phenomenal growth in such a short period of time can cause immense problems, particularly in urban areas. More and more persons have been added to cities, taxing the capacity of existing institutions. Business and industry must adjust to new and constantly changing situations to suit shifting needs. In a land of material plenty, vast numbers of Americans suffer poverty and unemployment and live in slum conditions. Countless thousands are victims of mental illness, of delinquency, of crime. The disruption of family life has reached alarming proportions.

As established institutions become less and less able to meet the demands of a rapidly growing population, the ability to forecast the effects of man's actions upon his natural and social environment becomes increasingly vital to the well-being of society. Particularly urgent is the need to develop new techniques for gaining deeper understanding of psychological and social relationships within the living community and its physical environment. Equally important, new methods for putting such knowledge to immediate use are needed in order to alleviate the physical and psychological deprivation suffered by a large part of the population, especially in cities. A massive, concerted effort within the natural, behavioral, economic, political, and social sciences is vital.

To assist in this effort, Boston College will begin soon at the Chestnut Hill campus the construction of a Center for the Social Sciences.

The building will be erected at the south end of the campus just inside the main gate at Beacon Street opposite and west of Campion Hall, the School of Education, and on the roadway running from Beacon Street to Gasson Hall.

The five-story center will have a total area of some 144,000 square feet, a height of 70 feet, and will be 296 feet long. The new building will be constructed on the space occupied by the "temporary" wooden barrack-type buildings since World War Two and used for the past several years for research laboratories and student activities.

The School of Social Work will move from its longtime downtown Boston location to the new facility. The departments of psychology and sociology will take up quarters in the Center, and there will be facilities for special research programs of the department of education, for the educational testing services of the University, and for guidance counselling services.

The Center will have two general goals:

1. The generation of intensive, large-scale research investigations into some of the contemporary critical issues concerning human behavior, social organizations, and social and psychological problems in urban areas.
2. The expansion of services for dealing with psychological, social, health, and welfare problems.

Boston College will commit a large measure of its scholarly resources to research in the social sciences because Boston College believes that the urban university has a very special responsibility to the community in which it lives and must be ready and willing to cooperate with that community in matters of common concern.

To that end Boston College established in 1964 the Institute of Human Sciences, itself a research center devoted to the broad problems of psychological and social functioning and malfunctioning in the modern urban environment.

The Institute, which now comprises seven distinguished social scientists, is particularly concerned with a number of special areas in which such problems have already manifested themselves.

Some of these are:

1. Poverty, its causes and consequences, and their relationship to social class in America.
2. Contemporary urban development and its relationship to urban renewal and urban planning.

3. Drastic social changes and crises, their sources, and their impact upon individual persons and groups.
4. Processes of human development and learning in preparation for the diverse and rapidly changing expectations in modern society.
5. Group processes, intergroup relations, and their potential for generating conflict or cooperation.
6. Ethnic discrimination and isolation and their effects upon social mobility and personal achievement.
7. Effects of social background, social status, and social competence upon the development and form of human behavior.
8. Patterns, causes, and consequences of such contemporary psycho-social ills as mental disorder, family disruption, delinquency, and crime.

These themes are not only central to the research objectives of the Institute of Human Sciences but they also provide a base for policy and program activities linking Institute research to the School of Social Work, the School of Education, and the School of Law, as well as to the formal social science departments of psychology and sociology.

Members of all social science departments will be encouraged and expected to participate in and contribute to Institute research projects. The departments of psychology and sociology will undertake studies in social or group dynamics, nearly all of their clinical work within the Greater Boston area. Scholars at the School of Social Work and the department of education will offer their special talents in counseling, testing, and other areas relevant to their respective disciplines.

To buttress the research activity the faculty will be markedly strengthened. The department of sociology, with three new members this year, now has nine persons; the objectives by 1970 is fifteen. The department of psychology now has thirteen members, a sharp increase over last year. The department intends to have twenty members by 1970. The School of Social Work has recently added five additional faculty for a total today of twenty-six. The School anticipates thirty-six persons on its faculty by 1970. All of the above-mentioned are and will be full-time members of the University faculty.

It will be a basic premise of scholars within the Center for the Social Sciences at Boston College that research is primarily valuable insofar as it is oriented to the processes, situations, and problems of major contemporary significance. There must be a consistent interplay between basic and applied problems. The practice professions, such as social work, education, law, and psychology, provide much of the impetus and background for this research; and they in turn can benefit materially from the advances produced by systematic study of underlying processes and problems.

The training of advanced students in psychology and sociology (a doctoral program in psychology, by the way, was established this year) will emphasize the importance of research which is meaningful and relevant to the nature of man rather than sterile exercises in logical and statistical techniques for their own sake. The research area sequence for advanced students will be closely associated with the realities of complex community life. Problems, illustrations, and techniques will relate to social behavior as it actually exists.

Subjects now under active consideration as special projects for the Institute of Human Sciences include:

1. Social planning and social policy—e.g. urban renewal, employment training, economic factors relating to delinquency and crime.
2. Concepts of public education—reformation of the educational system to take account of contemporary needs of urban, industrial society.
3. Economic, social, and psychological causes and effects of poverty.
4. Economic, social, and psychological causes and effects of racial and ethnic isolation.

5. Through analysis of existing statistical data, investigation of the specific causal factors leading to psychiatric pathology.

The Institute will continue to expand its interdisciplinary effort by bringing in additional faculty from other fields: economics, political science, history, and anthropology, for example—as well as psychology and sociology. The intent is not simply to achieve representation, but rather to make available to all scholars within the Center the methods, orientation, and specialized approaches of related fields of study in order to bring all possible resources to bear upon the alleviation of pressing social ills.

Nearly all of the anticipated projects of the Institute will be financed through grants from educational, research, and charitable foundations and from state and federal governments. Distinguished social scientists and scholars will be encouraged to bring prospective research projects to the Institute and to become affiliated with the Institute during their period of study.

Understanding a problem is the first step towards its solution. Boston College believes that only through a massive research effort in cooperation with other responsible persons and agencies can we begin to understand the complex problems within our complex society. Boston College believes, too, that the interdisciplinary approach—the pooling of knowledge, techniques, and professional skills—by scholars and scientists will enable the Center for the Social Sciences to make a significant breakthrough towards the solution of some of those problems.

MUSIC

HATH CHARMS . . .

by

RONALD NIEF

WATCH out, there's a "cultural explosion" going on around you!! From Symphony Hall to the Los Angeles Music Center, art is "in." Of course, once something is named to the "in" list you start to wonder about the sincerity of the interest. Nonetheless, there is interest and it is providing the necessary funds for all forms of art to continue.

This recent popularization might be more properly called an "implosion." Marshall McLuhan has pointed out that Western man has extended himself so far that there is now a "technological simulation of consciousness"—He no longer needs to react, for the action and reaction are both provided for him at the same time. It is the 'thinking man' who is sincerely turning back to the culture whence his consciousness came. Despite his involvement and commitment he has still, generally, avoided the establishment of a point of view to rival "good taste"—the enemy of cultural progress.

The past few years have shown a new feeling toward artistic activities on the Boston College Campus. There has been an improvement in quality and attendance as well as an increase in the variety of presentations. The student art exhibitions and the plans for the new Fine Arts Center, as well as the presence of C. Alexander Peloquin, Allison MacComber, and Peter Siragusa on campus all auger well for the future.

Probably one of the most outstanding of the performing arts groups at B.C. is the University Chorale. The interest which has been shown in the group by both students and alumni has been growing steadily, until, in this past season, the concerts drew three capacity audiences to Chestnut Hill as well as raves from critics in Florida and New York. (Credit must be given to a Miss Eileen Farrell who helped to draw one sizeable audience.)

There is generally a sincere interest in those who follow the Chorale's activities religiously. The audiences in Robert's Center must have both the discriminating qualities of the Muses as well as the stoic perseverance of posterior to enjoy the music while seated on the Puritan New England hardwood benches provided. Happily the memory which remains is that of the music, not of the pain.

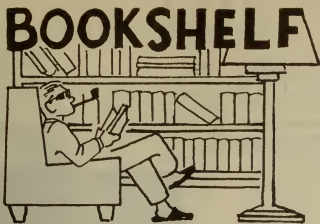

The presentation of Miss Farrell on campus has opened up a whole new world for the Chorale. If a discriminating artist, accustomed to working with organizations of the highest professional caliber, speaks as highly of the Boston College group as she does, then "we must be doing something right." The audience was the largest ever to attend a function of this sort on the campus and everything operated magnificently—even the acoustics were good. And while B.C. was enchanted with her, she was equally enthralled with the Chorale's ability to move from the tenderest Poulenc to the heaviest Russian Chorus with outstanding performances of both.

The season was loaded with firsts. The concert for the alumni at the Waldorf Astoria in New York marked the first tour engagement with the full 180 voices. Many in the audience had heard the men perform previously with the women of Molloy and New Rochelle Colleges. The question was generally—Why?, when you have one of the best women's groups right at home? No answer, but it won't happen again. The other milestone was the trip to Florida by twenty members of the group. Judging from the letters of Floridians who heard the performance (celebrating the Quadracentennial of St. Augustine) and from the lovely tans the gentlemen returned with, the concert was a great chance for exposure by all concerned.

For ninety seven years the music groups have needed an adequate place to perform on campus—one that lends to quality rather than presents a myriad of obstacles. Since it is very difficult to play basketball in a concert hall, the music groups have had to wait their turn. Well, it's coming, any year now. And all it took was an explosion. . . .

New York. The first essay is by John H. Finley, Jr., Harvard classicist, which I recommend leaving to the last since it had—for me—the most sensitive and moving mood in the book, and seemed to touch closest to the classical tradition which, since Origen, has flowed through the great Jesuit tradition.

From the whole book, one gathers a sense of ominousness, however—a sense of omens, in any event, but omens not easily divined; auguries that can leave one shaken and concerned, for they forecast an age, or ages, in which the role of the Catholic university becomes more certain than ever, the need more evident, but the task infinitely greater, more uncertain, more challenging and more perilous than ever before, since it can no longer content itself with a defense of the faith but must leap into the darkness with full trust in that faith, much as Teilhard de Chardin did to become a gadfly to his contemporaries but, after his death, an inspiration to a believing and would-be-believing world.

HERBERT A. KENNY

The Knowledge Explosion: The Centennial Colloquium at Boston College, Edited by Francis Sweeney, S.J., Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 249 pp., $4.95.

In 1963, 60 scholars gathered at a seminar at Boston College to honor the university on its 100th anniversary. They were asked to ponder and discuss the theme: "The Knowledge Explosion—Liberation and Limitation." The number of universities represented was flattering and the intensity of the consideration given the theme was a commendation to the work that has obtained on University Heights in the past two decades.

From the three-day program, the Rev. Francis Sweeney, S.J., whose Humanities Series has brought such distinction to the college, was elected to select a clutch of papers from those delivered and present them in book form as a permanent public reminder of a great moment in the life of Boston College.

Three years elapsed before the essays appeared in print bearing the colophon of a distinguished New York publishing house—Farrar, Straus & Giroux. The delay was unnecessary and another instance of the desperate need in this country for a Jesuit university press to further the scholarship abounding at the various institutions monitored by the society.

Father Sweeney writes in his introduction, "The cape work and sword play of first-class minds is always exciting and it is to be hoped that some of the electric tension generated by the discussion will be transmitted through these pages." Some of that has already gone into the blood and fibre of the college itself. It is the alumnus' turn to benefit.

From one point of view, all books have begun at the beginning but with these 15 papers I recommend that one first read (after Fr. Sweeney's introduction) Howard Mumford Jones' magnificent essay entitled, "Modern Scholarship and the Data of Greatness," which is second in the book. First of all, it states the theme of the colloquium with admirable simplicity: "The theme of the conference is whether we can simultaneously control the explosion in knowledge and maintain a free society resting on individual judgments. The implied dangers I suppose, are two. Either knowledge will be so accumulative as to dishearten men or the control of knowledge will come into the hands of an elite, who may employ the power of knowledge for purposes contrary to the democratic belief in will and judgment."

He concluded by saying, "It is difficult to make my point without unseemly rhetoric; yet, it is not in experience true that he who firmly and quietly proposes for himself to follow that knowledge which is of most worth will in the long run create for himself and those around him a stay against confusion somewhat more lasting than the merely contemporary mood?" That's as close as you can come to the agreed core of it.

Professor Peter A. Bertocci of Boston University asked all to adopt a responsible commitment to mutual freedom so that the individual may never be lost sight of. Biologist Paul A. Weiss of the Rockefeller Institute emphasized the copulative "and" in "Liberation and Limitation." The circumstances created by the "knowledge explosion" are not an "either-or" situation; they are a challenge that we must all live with—and by. Quite right, says the Rev. Edward Duff, S.J.—the knowledge explosion has an immediate consequence of a loss of individuality, a push toward economic socialism, and a socialism of the intellect.

John G. Kemeny of Dartmouth, a mathematician, also chose the library as a parameter for the growth of information. He fears a sense of futility will set in, and urged a radical revamping of education, and seemed to indicate that the elite Jones fears is almost inescapable. Walter J. Bate, professor of English at Harvard University—author of the recent, profound study of John Keats—also called for a "new education," conceived in "drastic terms."

To hint that the depth or substance of such admirable papers is touched by such snippets as given above is to do an intolerable injustice to each man. Read them all and in full. Let me list the other contributors: Francis O. Schmitt of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Carlton S. Coon, distinguished anthropologist; Peter H. Odegar, professor of political science at the University of California; Vincent P. Wright, Boston College professor of economics; Harold C. Cassidy, professor of chemistry, Yale University; Lynn T. White, Jr., professor of history at the University of California at Los Angeles; and Samuel A. Goudsmith, professor of physics at Brookhaven, National Laboratory in

Man-Made Morals: Four Philosophies that Shaped America, by William H. Marnell '27. (Doubleday & Co. Inc.)

"I think that in no country in the civilized world is less attention paid to philosophy than in the United States. The Americans have no philosophical school of their own; and they care but little for all the schools into which Europe is divided, the very names of which are scarcely known to them. Yet it is easy to perceive that almost all the inhabitants of the United States conduct their understanding in the same manner, and govern it by the same rules; that is to say, without ever having taken the trouble to define the rules, they have a philosophical method common to the whole people." It is precisely this method of which Alexis de Tocqueville spoke a century ago, a philosophical method implicit and somewhat subterranean, which Professor Marnell dissects in his Man-made Morals.

This book is a refreshing example of that cross-fertilization of disciplines which can be so fruitful. The author is a Professor of English Literature from whom a philosopher can learn philosophy. His insight into the concrete historical situations and individual personalities is organized by his mastery of the philosophical principles which guide, influence, and at times serve as excuses for decisions of practical affairs.

For Professor Marnell, two thinkers loom above all others as incarnations of these positions. For Thomas Hobbes, moral law is man-made. Consequently, law is the father of morality and morality is reduced to a general attitude beneficial to self-preservation. Thus for Hobbes, man is a social being not by nature, as Aristotle had seen it, but by historical necessity.

Anthony Ashley Cooper, third Earl of Shaftesbury (1671-1713), is the proximate source of another major current of present day ethical thinking. Religious "enthusiasm" is his starting point as the common enemy, and he suggests ridicule to neutralize "enthusiasm." The primary purpose of Shaftesbury was the refutation of Hobbes' doctrine that moral law is man-made. The moral sense in man seems to root the perception of moral values in human nature.

All the Founding Fathers believed in a divinely created order, in God and divine providence. Among these rights are human freedom and equality. No one religion is represented. If there is a common denominator to the Founding Fathers' religious convictions, it is the Shaftesburian moral sense. The American Revolution then was grounded in the concept of natural law and a divinely created order. The French Revolution on the other hand was grounded upon the concept that society is a mechanism, a man-made order, created by human will. It is Marnell's thesis that this resulted in the Reign of Terror.

Political philosophy, however, teaches an order of nature; natural law is rooted in the notion of nature. In political science, the particular political order—monarchy, aristocracy or democracy—is conventional and man-made; there is "no more a Divine Right of Kings than there is a Divine Right of Presidents." Thomas Paine may be right to destroy a man-made political order—but only if he has something to put in its place. The political order is natural to this extent. The kind of political order is arbitrary but some kind of political order is natural!

To this reader, the present day burning issues of Civil Rights and Federal Aid to Religious Education are examples of the pertinency of the principles which Professor Marnell is examining. Civil Rights are not man-made, but based on a more fundamental natural law. Whatever excuse may be claimed for Civil Disobedience for example, has to rest on the appeal to a more basic natural law with which particular civil laws are in conflict.

As Professor Marnell shows so graphically, philosophy can be a dangerous game! Like Russian roulette the loser can lose all that he has and is, while, too often for the winner all seems to remain as it was before. Yes, philosophy is dangerous in its fashion—but neglect of philosophy enables metaphysical principles to go underground, as it were, and to influence thinking which on the surface appears to be simply pragmatic and practical.

WHO SAID VACATION?

When that last final examination has been given and the Commencement program becomes history, the college professors depart from the campus, cheered by the thought of a long, lazy summer. True? Far from it! The campus is nearly as busy in summer as it is throughout the academic year. Many faculty members teach in the summer session, while others have greater opportunity to proceed with specific research in their field of endeavor.

Here is just a sampling of the summer work done by some of the Boston College faculty. From the Department of Economics, Prof. Leon Smolinski visited Europe doing research on Karl Marx's attitude towards advanced mathematical methods in economic research. "Soviet economists," says Dr. Smolinski, "opposed the use of mathematical economics for many years; as a result, their economic theory remains primitive. I want to find out how justified their claims were."

Prof. Joseph Sullivan, Associate Chairman, Mathematics, continued his writing of a book on Real Analysis, under contract to Van Nostrand Co., in cooperation with Prof. N. B. Haaser of Notre Dame. The book will be used at the college junior-senior level and include such topics as metric spaces, normed linear spaces and Lebesgue integration.

From the Psychology department, Prof. Joseph Cautela has also begun a contract with Van Nostrand to do a book on Behavior Therapy. The subject calls for a new approach to the treatment of abnormal behavior based on learning principles and is expected to challenge the psychoanalytic treatment of behavior disorders.

A summer grant has enabled Prof. John R. Betts of the History department to continue work on his book, "Sports in American Social History" as well as continued research on his biography of P. T. Barnum.

The Physics department, busier than ever with its preparations to move into their new quarters in Higgins Hall, did not slow down from its usual busy research projects. Dr. Joseph Chen continued work on a research contract from the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories, studying the growth and physical properties of optical and magnetic single crystals. Dr. Robert Carovillano, working under another Air Force contract, is doing advanced research on sponsored project. Under a NASA sponsored project, Rev. John Kinnier, S.J., spent the summer at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland, while Dr. Edward Jezak received a summer faculty appointment to the Center for Graduate Study in Richmond, Washington.

Also preparing to move into new quarters, the Biology department proceeded with a number of special research projects. Rev. William D. Sullivan, S.J., Chairman is doing cancer research under a grant from the Massachusetts division of the Cancer Institute and has already published a number of reports on his findings. Dr. Yu-Chen Ting and Dr. Chai-Hyun Yoon are researching under National Institute of Health grants; Dr. Robert Coleman and Dr. Joseph Orland both work with a National Science Foundation grants. The move to the larger quarters in Higgins will bring expanded programs to the department, including Biochemistry, Biophysics, Immunochemistry and Electron Microscopy.

In the Geology department, Fr. James Skehan, S.J., under an Air Force Laboratory project, continued his research on geophysical data in connection with earthquake activity near the Olympic-Wallowa mountain area of Oregon-Washington.

Summer quiet on the Heights? Never—there work continues incessantly in the quest for more learning in this day of the "knowledge explosion."

NEW FACULTY

Although over 75 additions were made to the University faculty for the coming year, present space permits the mention of but a few. Perhaps the most interesting appointments were made in the Theology department, where in the spirit of ecumenism, a Catholic woman, a Jewish scholar and a Protestant layman were named to the faculty. Dr. Mary Daly holds a Ph.D. from both St. Mary's College, Notre Dame and the University of Fribourg. Dr. David Neiman received his Ph.D. from Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, Philadelphia, while Dr. Joseph A. Burgess, with a Bachelor of Divinity from Luther Theological Seminary, St. Paul, holds a Doctorate in Theology from the University of Basel, Switzerland.

Alumni Weekend Aftermath

"Coming from out of town, my wife and I particularly appreciated the arrangements which permitted us to stay at Cheverus Hall. I hope this practice will be continued at least for the anniversary classes if not for all."

Albert V. Nyren, '41
Department of State,
Washington, D.C.

"The members of the Class of 1916 express their gratitude for the excellent arrangements made for their comfort and convenience during the Alumni Weekend. I am deeply grateful to you for your courteous and efficient cooperation that produced such excellent results."

Francis J. Roche, '16

"A great time was had by all in this 'first' Alumni Weekend. It made it especially nice for us on our Tenth Anniversary. Thank you for this great job you have done."

Pat and Mert Thompson, '56

"Just a brief note to congratulate you and your associates on the wonderful Alumni Weekend program which was carried off so successfully. It was the best planned, best executed and best carried out by all concerned. The reports that I have heard on every event were excellent."

Tom Cudmore, '40

"On behalf of the members of the Silver Anniversary Class, I wish to extend our sincere thanks for your contribution to the success of our 25th reunion. Cheverus Hall was a delightful spot, everyone was pleased with the food in McElroy and at the Champagne Dance, but the Baccalaureate Mass, Commencement and the reception following, provided a grand climax to a truly wonderful weekend.

We of the Class of 1941 are convinced that this great Alumni Weekend of 1966, brought together the best alumni gathering in the history of Boston College."

Tom Finnegan's daughter Barbara (College of New Rochelle) was Maid of Honor at the wedding of Elizabeth Murphy (College of New Rochelle and Boston College School of Education), daughter of William D. 15 PHILIP J. BOND 18 Houston St., W. Roxbury, Mass.

Twenty-nine days from Quincy to California. Sounds like the days of the Prairie Schooner. To be exact it was quite a few years later, to be exact 1923 when George J. Casey, accompanied by his wife, Lillian Gertrude Harrington, of Roxbury and their family made this trip, part of it through the still formidable Indian Country in what he called an "Overland Special" with six flaps to protect against storms.

George settled in Hollywood. His wife, under the name of Louise Gibney, had a long and successful career as a silent screen favorite. Their Golden Wedding will be celebrated on April 6, 1967. They have one son, three daughters, twelve grandchildren, and two great grandchildren.

Their son, Clarke Jerome Casey, is an authority on Americana and genealogy. Associated with the Cherokee Book Shop he has contributed rare books to several California colleges. He started as an end on the football teams of Loyola High and Loyola University, Los Angeles, and is one of their all-time greats. Daughter Patricia, known as Lorna Thayer worked as a child actress in motion pictures. She is an alumna of Immaculate Heart College, Los Angeles, where she excelled in dramatics. She has appeared in many television serials, and in major network shows such as "Wagon Train," "Black Saddle," "The Californians." She has appeared with Bing Crosby, Helen Hayes, John Raitt. For more than twenty years she has been a leading actress on television, stage and screen. She is married to George Neise, an actor. They have two daughters and two granddaughters. Daughter Anne Davis is married to Joseph A. Budzisz, a graduate of Missouri School of Mines. They have six children. Anne, a graduate of Immaculate Heart College, before marriage was a deputy sheriff in Los Angeles, an Armed Services Hostess in Japan, and an elementary teacher. Her husband is a missile engineer employed by the North American Aircraft Plant, Downey, California. He designs and installs all the piping in the space vehicles, Apollo, Saturn, and others under construction.

Daughter Adrienne Bernadette, A.B., Immaculate Heart College is the wife of Robert Klein. They have four children, two boys and two girls. Mr. Klein is vice-president and executive secretary of the television stations out of Salinas and San Luis Obispo, and affiliated radio stations. He is a graduate of the University of California.

Teacher-coach for five years in Quincy, Mass. Several years of teacher-coaching in California, Los Angeles area, all in Catholic High Schools. Diocesan settlement house director in the Mexican sections of Los Angeles. Social worker and private resources investigator for the State of California in Los Angeles. Western manager of several national Catholic magazines. Contributor and circulation manager of the California Pictorial Magazine, now in its eleventh year on the stands. Although semi-retired George, during the school year 1965-66, taught Mathematics at Northridge Military Academy and may return for another year despite the fact that a wag on the faculty asked him if he remembered Abraham Lincoln. George is a professed tertiary, Brother Anthony in the Third Order of Saint Francis. Any Sunday you may find leading Prayers and Petitions of the Faithful at the seven o'clock morning Mass in the Blessed Sacrament Church, Jesuit, in Hollywood. George describes himself as an average citizen. His classmates would rank him as superior—the quiet man who gets things done.

Charles O'Halloran retired from the Boston schools five years ago. He and his wife decided to make a permanent retirement home in Savannah, Georgia because their daughter, four grandchildren from 16 to 4 and son-in-law live there. Their son-in-law is a prominent orthopedic surgeon who is chief of staff in the Savannah Memorial Hospital. He played football for Clemson in the Sugar Bowl against Boston College. He met his wife at Yale where he was a resident physician in a hospital connected with the Yale School of Nursing and she was studying for a master's degree in science. Following a bachelor's degree in Nursing from Boston University.

Charles taught three years in the junior high in Savannah. He has served since retirement as a permanent substitute and is in demand to cover classes of absentee teachers. In between calls he tours the Georgia mountains, makes trips to the seacoast, goes on hunting trips with his son-in-law, visits the Bahamas. All this in addition to a lawn well trimmed, with neat shrubbery and well controlled Spanish moss on the giant oaks. He reports that our Cardinal Cushing is held in high esteem in Savannah. He is frequently quoted in the press. The diocesan paper, "The Southern Cross," gives him frequent coverage.

The law offices of Flynn and Flynn are on Main Street in Waltham. Four of the six members of the staff are Flynns.

Paul L. Flynn is the senior member. Paul married Alice J. Fahy of Waltham and has four children. Daughter Andrea is married to John A. Robert married Ann Campbell of Winchester and has a daughter Amy six months old.

Roger J. the youngest, graduated from Boston College and obtained his master's degree in chemistry at Northeastern University. He is employed as a chemist at Geiger Chemical Company in Cranston, Rhode Island.

16 JAMES L. O'BRIEN 41 Pond Circle, Jamaica Plain

Our Golden Anniversary Celebration was a great success due to the wonderful work of Frank Roche, Fred Gillis, Monsignor McNulty and Dr. Roy Heffernan.

Our class followed many careers and received many honors: Our class list shows two Bishops and thirty-seven Priests, one Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, twenty-two Businessmen including City Manager of Cambridge, twenty-five Educators including one College President and one Superintendent of the Boston Public Schools and one Diocesan Superintendent, seven Lawyers, one Judge, five Government Service, two Dentists, seven Doctors, eight War Casualties and two Classmates died while Seminarymen.

On Alumni Day, a plaque in remembrance of Jack Atkinson was blessed and dedicated in Alumni Hall.

Our most memorable event was the Reception to the class by the President of the College. The greatest number of class members and their wives attended this meeting. Father Walsh presented each member of the class with a beautiful Coat-of-Arms of Boston College. For the first time our wives participated in all events.

Harold Fleming was elected our President for 1966-1967.

The couple who came the longest distance was Arthur Gormley and his wife — all the way from Iowa.

Dr. Roy Heffernan received a nice note from Father Gerald Fitzgerald . . .
"Dear Dr. Roy,

I'm afraid I am a sort of lost tribe of Israel as regards to B.C. '16 is concerned — but let me assure you it is of the necessity of the job the Lord has given me to do rather than in indifference to our wonderful Class at B.C. To both B.C. and our classmates I am permanently grateful.

Regards to the classmates passing slowly by en route to the greater 'Heights'."

17 THOMAS D. CRAVEN
107 Barrett St., Needham, Mass.

Eighteen members of the class responded to the call of John Flynn and were present at the annual dinner meeting on April 25 at Alumni Hall. Those present included Fr. Maurice Dullea, S.J., Msgr. Frank Flaherty, Msgr. Frank Quinn, Tom Craven, Dan Daley, Jack Doyle, Walter Duran, John Flynn, Frank Heanue, Marty Higgins, Jack McCarty, Rado McKeown, Bo Mahoney, Maurice Murphy, Bill Reid, Charley Sharkey, Jim Slattery and Ed Tobin. Tentative plans for the observance of the 50th anniversary of our graduation were discussed. The class is in the unique situation of being the first class to spend four years on the new campus at the Heights.

Jim Slattery was present with the class for the first time in 49 years. He is now retired from the insurance business in Cleveland. He reports that he has 26 grandchildren. In anticipation of the 50th anniversary next year he is planning to be back with the class in '67.

Fr. Joe Merrick, S.J. in reply to the gift which the class sent to him in Baghdad states that the gift was donated to Jesuit Missions. He, along with the rest of the class, is thinking of the passage of time and expressed himself as being in a state of wonderment as to how many who formed the first freshman class at the Heights in 1913 are alive.

Bo Mahoney reports that son, Michael, graduated from St. Michael's in June will enter Wyoming University on a COE fellowship and will work towards his master's degree in American Studies.

Jim Kelley passed away last January. Evidently it was not known to us at the time of our annual dinner. He had worked in advertising for newspapers in Boston and Lowell for years. May his soul rest in peace.

Jack Doyle suffered the loss of his wife in May. A graduate of Simmons College, Mrs. Doyle was a member of the Simmons College Corporation and past president of the Simmons Alumnae Association. She taught at Belmont and Hyde Park High Schools. For many years she was executive secretary of the Boston League of Women Voters and was active in the League of Catholic Women and the Guild of the Infant Savior. At the solemn requiem Mass in St. Theresa's Church, West Roxbury, the class was represented by Fr. Maurice Dullea, John Flynn, Bill Reid, Maurice Murphy, and Tom Craven. The sincere sympathy of the class is extended to Jack, his two sons, John and Dick, and to the members of the Keegan family. May she rest in peace.

Msgr. Francis Egan, pastor of St. William's Church, Dorchester, has retired. He had previously served as pastor in South Natick, Abington, West Acton and West Grotton.

'18 M. FRANCIS NOLAN
17 South Normandy Ave.
Cambridge, Mass. 02138

Received a nice newsy letter from Charlie Fitzgerald. He has, as he phrases it, defected to Florida. His new address is 3930 Crystal Lake Drive — Apt. 308, Pompano Beach, Florida, 33060. He has recently corresponded with our two classmates, Bishop John McEleney, S.J. of Jamaica, B.W.I. and Bishop Kennelly of the Caroline and Marshall Islands at Truk in the mid-Pacific.

We also had a long and newsy letter from Frank McNamara who has had eminent success in the field of law since our commencement. Frank is a partner in the law firm of Cummings and Lockwood in Stamford, Conn., ever since his retirement as General Counsel for the Sperry Rand Corp. in 1961. His son Francis Jr., is also a partner in this firm. He is a graduate of Gonsaga High, Georgetown University and Georgetown Law School. He is married to Noreen O'Connor, a graduate of Manhattanville, Fordham Law School, holding a Master of Laws degree from N.Y.U. They live in Stamford, Conn. with their six children.

Frank's daughter Lois, is a graduate of Immaculate Seminary in Washington, D.C., and Finch College in New York City. Is married to Peter Driscoll A.B. Holy Cross and resides in West Redding, Conn., with their eight children.

Daughter Jeanne graduated from Rosemont College in Philadelphia, is married to Herman Eckrich a Villanova graduate and they live in Fort Wayne, Indiana with their five children.

Prayers of the class and sympathy to the family of Thomas "Sid" Hurley who died on July 26th.

'19 FRANCIS J. ROLAND
10 Homewood Rd., W. Roxbury

On Sunday, June 19, 1966 Rev. Martin P. Harney S.J. celebrated his fiftieth anniversary as a member of the Society of Jesus by offering a Solemn High Mass in St. Ignatius Church, Chestnut Hill. The deacon of the Mass was Rev. Maurice V. Dullea S.J. and the sub-deacon Rev. James J. Mohan S.J. The sermon was given by another classmate Rev. Edward T. Douglas S.J. After the Mass Father Harney held a reception for one thousand guests in the McElroy Commons.

The class has suffered a severe loss in the death of John J. Joyce on May 3, 1966. John was an able student with a buoyant, friendly personality which attracted a host of friends throughout the alumni. Our deep sympathy is extended to the members of his family. We shall sorely miss John's happy presence at the alumni gatherings.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to our class president "Joe" McAvinue whose wife Edith was killed in an automobile collision on November 14, 1965; also to Father Leo O'Day on the death of his sister, and to "Chris" Garrahan on the death of his brother John. We trust that the members of the class will ask God to grant to the departed dear ones everlasting peace and to their bereaved families the grace and courage to bear this pain of loss.

The "Lowell contingent" always so loyal to class and alumni activities reports that Johnnie Gardner, one of its most faithful members, has been recently hospitalized but is now rapidly recovering.

'20 J. ROBERT BRAWLEY
33 Pomfret St., W. Roxbury, Mass.

Seen at Father Martin Harney's golden anniversary party at the Heights were Jack Sheehan, Monsignor John Lane, Tom Gately, Joe Joyce, Frank Earls and the class secretary. It was a wonderful tribute to a wonderful priest and 1920 congratulates Father Martin who is our annual guest at our reunions.

May 29th found many of the Forty Thieves celebrating the 50th anniversary of their graduation from B.C. High School. Receiving their gold diplomas were Fred Donaher, Gerry O'Neil, Joe White, Art Robetie, Pop Pyne, Billy Bond, Duke Wellings, Frank O'Brien, Phil Mackey, John McMorrow and Bob Brawley who received an honorary one.

Alumni Week in June is difficult to report on as attendance was scattered amid the varied activities but Father Lane, Jack Sheehan, Joe Joyce, Pop Pyne, and the class secretary were seen at several of the functions. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Crowley attended the reception to Father Rector on June 15 at the Bal Harbour Beach Club in Florida by the B.C. Club of Miami. Bill Lyons better known to 1920 as Yinnid Snoyl was in town at Commencement time and dropped in for lunch with the class secretary. He renewed memories of his World War I days when he was assigned to Holy Cross College as an instructor following his commissioning as a lieutenant in the Army and had Bob Coyne, the cartoonist in his outfit. He and Bob were reminiscing when in came Leo Aicardi. This now became a real reunion as Bill Lyons was on here from Goleta Bay, Calif. and Leo Aicardi was up from Ft. Lauderdale, Florida and both met by chance at the secretary's desk.

Jack and Loretta Sheehan vacationed in Ireland in the past late spring. The class of 1920 extends its best wishes to Agnes Wellings who was married in July. Dan Lucey has had a rough year so far having been hospitalized several times but his faithful pal, Pop Pyne reports him as recovering nicely. The vice president in charge of birthday cards has to apologize once more to 1920. Due to hospitalization a complete foul-up occurred so if your greetings came at the wrong time, please forgive him. Those birthdays came fast enough at our age without being speeded up.

'21 JEREMIAH W. MAHONEY
75 Federal St., Boston, Mass. 02110

The class extends its sincere sympathy to Mrs. Gordon Irons and to the members of her family upon the sudden death of Gordon on July 15, 1966. He was in excellent spirits at the Alumni Day Exercises in June, and his death was a shock to us. Gordon, as our permanent Class Secretary, correspondent for our Class News and active in solicitation for gifts to the College for many years, was very loyal to Alma Mater.

Bishop Minihan presided at the Solemn High Mass. The celebrant was a first cousin of Gordon. In the sanctuary were Father Martin Harney, S.J., Father Walter McInerney, brother of our Henry, and several other priests. Father Walsh, S.J., President of the College, and two priest members of the faculty said prayers for the soul of Gordon at the wake.

Included in the Honorary Pallbearers were Messrs. Jack Burke, Fallon, Frank Hannon, McGrath, O'Neil, O'Regan, Russo, and your correspondent.

At the Alumni Day Exercises, in addition to Gordon, were Fathers Fox, O'Lalor and Frank Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Flynn, and Messrs. Paul Burke, Donovan, Dowling, Fallon, Foynes, Gookin, Giraffe, McGrath, McInerney, Murray, Russo, Judge Sullivan and your correspondent.

In June Jim Fitzpatrick retired after 45 years as teacher, coach and Athletic Director at Portland Maine High School, where for many years he established an enviable record as a gentleman, teacher and coach. On May 30, 1966 he was toasted at a testimonial dinner, attended by over 600 friends and admirers, including his old battery mate and receiving end, Luke Urban. Best of luck to you Jim, for the future.

Judge John Sullivan continues his extended winter vacations at Palm Springs and summer vacations at Osterville which accounts for his proclamation that he will be in active harness for many years to come.

This space will be reserved in the next issue for the purpose of recording the identity of classmates with great-grandchildren. Don't laugh.

'22 NATHANIEL J. HASENFUS
15 Kirk St., W. Roxbury, Mass.

Because I spent the summer in Maine, class news is hard to gather. However it seem that retirements of class members are of first interest this issue. John Barry has retired from his post of a Vice-President of National Shawmut Bank after a very busy and fruitful life as news commentator, Globe editor, and so on ad infinitum. Charles Collins has retired from his very exciting position as a Vice-President of Old Colony Trust and spent part of his early retirement in Europe. Ralph Shea has retired from his life time with Standard Brands and is now Postmaster at Osterville. Hubert Gilgan has retired from a lifetime of teaching and as an administrator and headmaster of his Randolph High and finally superintendent. These retirements leave only a few of us actually at work. While on the subject of retirement, I might say that Portland Press Herald full page feature to Jimmy Fitzpatrick '21 showed how well the great Jimmy was held in esteem by his many friends and colleagues in New England sportsfields and among educators. In my opinion Jimmy was the athlete who did the most for Boston College in its entire history — four letter man: football, baseball, hockey, and basketball, captain of two sports — surely the legendary figure of all time.

We expect President James Doyle to announce the chairman of our 45th anniversary soon—and expect great things on Alumni Day, 1967.

'23 MRS. FRANCIS L. FORD

Your secretary hopes you have all had a good summer and enjoyed your vacations and would give her a little information once in a while.

Peter Monahan was visiting in this part of the country this summer. He is living in San Anselmo, California and is teaching in a Catholic high school. One of his sons recently received his degree in Medicine from Creighton University School of Medicine and another son is a teacher.

Ed Dullea's son Billie graduated from Boston College High School this past June and is entering Boston College in the Fall.

At the close of the school year in June, Myles McSweeney retired. He has been teaching at the Parlin Junior High School in Everett for the past several years. We hope you enjoy your retirement Myles, for many years to come.

We learned that Gaynor Wellings has just returned from an extended trip to Europe—having had a most enjoyable vacation.

Cecil McGoldrick's son Fred, received a master's degree in International Affairs from Columbia University. Congratulations.

Joe Comber's son, Rev. Brother Maximus, an Xaverian Brother, is on the faculty of St. John's Preparatory School in Danvers. He attended Catholic University, Harvard University and has a degree in Sacred Scripture from the University of St. Louis.

At a Nuptial Mass at St. John's Church in Quincy, Paul Coughlan, youngest son of our dear departed Gerry Coughlan was united in marriage to Miss Barbara Phillips of Quincy. It was a very beautiful wedding followed by a reception at the Blue Hills Country Club.

Dr. Joe Delaney has just returned from one of his yearly trips to Europe where he visited with his grandchildren.

A call to Charlie Wyatt out in Taunton finds him happily retired and keeping busy with his hobbies. He wishes to be remembered to the boys of the class.

Fr. Harold McDermott has completed his new church and rectory in Bedford, Mass. He has extended a most cordial invitation to his classmates to visit him and see the beautiful 18th century paintings he has acquired as well as a wood carving of St. Michael which is suspended from the ceiling of the church.

When I contacted George Olsen he merely said everything was fine with him and that he had two marvelous grandchildren, a boy and a girl.

Ed Fogarty's two sons graduated from Harvard University and Harvard Graduate School—Young Edward is Group Production Manager for Colgate-Palmolive Co. in New York, and Richard is Manager in Charge of the New England Division for Shaeffer Beer, located in New York. Ed is still with the Boston School Department.

Al Bedard's son, James, was recently discharged from the U.S. Army Signal Corps after 3 years of service. He was stationed at the Natick, Mass. laboratories.

Our sincerest sympathy is extended to Cecil and Mary McGoldrick on the death at Easterime of Mary's brother, Fr. Ernest A.

Ford, pastor of St. Anne's Church in Littleton, Mass. May he rest in Peace.

Also, our sincerest sympathy is extended to Fr. Edmund Croke, whose mother passed away recently. She will be remembered in our prayers and may she rest in peace.

Martin Murray has retired from teaching at Brighton High. He lost his sister and his brother in the last few months and is living alone at 255 Rice Ave., Point of Pines, Revere. He still keeps active and interested, and still sings church solos. He'll shoot me for telling but I happen to know he still goes to Boston at 2 A.M. once a month for Nocturnal Adoration at St. Clement's Shrine.

My old buddy, Walter Keliher, also retired from Brighton High lives at 33 Gale St., Malden. He is an inveterate walker, circumambulating is what he calls it, a good deal of it in the South End and Roxbury. He is alone except for a brother in Texas.

Drop around and see Tony LeBlanc at 45 Maynard St., Arlington. He has been pretty much confined to the house for several years but is "up and around". Except for Joan, the mother of two grandchildren, who lives in New Jersey, Tony and Margaret are still surrounded by their children, Phil who works for Bell Tel. Labs, David a salesman, Danice, who is starting Bryant & Stratton's this Fall, and Sue, who returned this summer from a year of teaching in Japan. She is starting teaching in Arlington in September.

Pray for the souls of John Monahan and Michael Connolly.

As we enter our 42nd year as members of the Alumni, it is our sad task to record the passing of another of our class leaders of student days. Joseph M. Gavan, prize orator and outstanding debater in high school and college years, died June 17th in Cambridge, Mass. The funeral was from the residence on Allston Street where Joe had lived all his life. Upon graduation from Harvard Law School he had become Secretary to the Chief Justice of the Mass. Supreme Court, helping in case researches and in decision writing. Later he practiced law in Cambridge until the time of his death. R.I.P.

June 17th also marked the passing of Fr. Jerry Gearans' mother, in Waltham, Mass. Fr. Jerry came from Lompac, California and was visited by several classmates who had noticed the name in the newspaper death list, where the announcement of Mrs. Gearans' death was just above Joe Gavans'. (Fr. Jerry appears to be the youngest looking and least changed in appearance of all of our classmates. He is pensioned from the Navy where he was a Chaplain for a long time and is soon to be pensioned from the federal prison at Lompac where he is now Chaplain.)

On July 14th our well remembered classmate Bernard Walsh died. Bernie was a Brookline resident while at B.C., but after graduation he moved to Somerville where he served thirty years as a teacher in the public schools. He is survived by his wife, Kathleen (Hargraves), a son, Bernard Jr., two daughters, Kathleen (Gilardi) and Mar- garet, and two sisters, Isabell and Margaret Walsh of Brookline.

The annual McCrehan Award this year was presented at the baseball teams "Break up" dinner as the June 11th Holy Cross game was cancelled due to rain. Joe Kozlowsky is custodian of this annual memorial to our classmate "Cheese" and Jerry Grey was assigned to make the presentation.

Keep your eyes on the T.V. news. You may see a classmate anytime.

On the June 12 evening T.V. news broadcasts, our classmate Frank Galline appeared vigorously shaking hands with a handicapped invalid pupil he had tutored through high school. Superintendent Ohrenberger and Mrs. Hicks of the School Committee were present to congratulate the diploma recipient in his home, and Frank shared in the tribute paid in recognition of a most unusual achievement. It will be remembered that Frank helped many less handicapped persons (classmates) through B.C. in the 1920's.

Then a few weeks later during the Republican State Convention our "Red Dan" Lynch sat in full view of the camera (often close up) while George Lodge, Edward Brook and Senator Saltonstall spoke and during the counting of ballots Daniel was "on camera." This went on for about an hour until viewers began to telephone in and ask whether photogenic Dan was going to speak, sing, dance or explain what happens to parking tags at the Boston Municipal Court.

Earlier in the year—Invited to the President dinner for wealthy class members on April 27 were the following: Lester Callahan, "Tref" Maloney, Fred Mahony, Al Hyland, John Hanrihan, Ed O'Neilly, and Jack McDonald. Dun and Bradstreet ratings groups these names to the top as worthy representatives of the Medicare and Poverty Program set — including those hidden in church rectories, on teachers pension rolls, and in security institutions of the government. They oversubscribed the Development Fund.

Advertising in The Pilot, front page, Francis P. Carroll '25 (whom Ed. Brickley describes as a "look alike" for Harry Truman) announced a Motor Coach Tour on July 23 and 24 to New Hampshire. John Hanrihan's Albany Carpet Cleaning Company likewise had front page space. The late Frank Ebery's Ford Co.—advertisement was on the back page. These with an occasional McLaughlin & Reilly Co. ad give B.C. '25 fair representation in our diocesan paper and reflect our vigorous efforts to maintain a favorable economic climate hereabouts for future B.C. graduates.

Speaking of future generations, here are a few items about children of our classmates:

On June 25th, Margaret Doyle, B.C. graduate, and daughter of our first class President, Billy "Dyker" Doyle, married B.C. graduate Thomas Wheelan of Gardner, Mass. The ceremony was performed by Msgr. Jay Doyle (Dyker's brother). The bride was given in marriage by her brother James. Mary, a sister, was maid of honor, and the children of another sister (Patricia) served as Junior bridesmaids (Ellen and Susan Flanagan of Detroit, Mich.) and as flower girl (Maureen). Ushers included William J. (Jr.) John and Richard and Paul. William (Jr.) is a well known Antique Dealer on Third Avenue in New York City and Patricia's twin sister Anne continues on the road to eminence in the field of education. She is a Professor at Mt. Holyoke College. Mrs. Wm. J. Doyle (Marie Gallahue) mother, (and grandmother) of the above, and herself a Radcliffe graduate, is back teaching—to fill out her spare time now.

The Emmanuel College News (May 1966 issue) reported on the family of our Hon. John C. Fitzgerald, (Circuit Court Judge in Chicago), Mrs. (Mildred Collins) Fitzgerald and their five children. J. Cushing is a trader (we assume that to be on the Stock Exchange). Ann lives in Greenwich, Conn., Moira a Toronto University graduate, is married to a medical student at Chicago Univ. Sara is a Marquette graduate now specializing in Montessori training, Mark (19) is a sophomore engineering student at the University of Illinois.

Dedham Superintendent of Schools, Lawrence Brown '25, (and his brother Rev. John '25) were proud witnesses at the graduation of John's twin daughters, Kathleen and Carol, who with John's son, James, received degrees from the B.C. School of Education in June. Kathleen won the Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Roberts award presented that day. Our year book was dedicated to Mrs. Roberts, you will remember, and Vincent Roberts received an honorary degree from the College in appreciation of his many benefactions. So the class of 1925 figured high in B.C. affairs again this year. Lawrence resigned his $18,600 a-year-post this month and will take life a little easier now.

Kathleen Ellen Hyland, daughter of our Albert J., graduated in June from Newton College of the Sacred Heart with an A.B. degree.

Kathryn Mary Spellman, born July 19 is your Correspondent's third grandchild.

George F. Donovan, Director of, and Professor in, the Higher Education Program, School of Education, The Catholic University of America, Washington, has accepted the position of Chairman of the Department of Education at Marquette University, Milwaukee.

'26 WILLIAM J. CUNNINGHAM
40 Tennyson Street
West Roxbury, Mass. 02132

The summer seems to be the dry period, as far as news goes; all you wealthy gent's take off for parts unknown and no one hears about you until football starts again. Met Frankie Colbert a week ago, crossing the street in front of his Dedham postoffice; there he was, bending over to take a peek at the plates on my car as I drove along. He was admiring my "B.C.-26" plates, without knowing who was driving. Frank is well and busy completing the "Bay State Postmaster," of which he is the editor.

Wedding notices and items about our various offspring gives a bit of news. Connie Moynihan's young Connie married Elizabeth Rouse of Maryland in July. Young Connie is Georgetown and Harvard Law and the young lady is Manhattanville and Middlebury. Patrick J. Sullivan, the late Pat's boy, married Phyllis Fay of Roxbury early this summer; they'll live in Brighton. Ed Mullooney's daughter Mary O'Hearn (remember Ed's middle name?) married George Birch of Mountain Lakes, N.J. She was Cardinal Cushing College and he was Colby.

Our own John, B.C. '64 and Dartmouth Grad School '66, married Ellen Condon of West Roxbury in June; they're living for the time being in Rumford, Maine, where John works with Oxford Paper Company. They will live in New York in January. Ellen's dad, Dick, is a regular at all sports events at the Heights. She is an Emmanuel grad. John and Mae Dorsey looked very well when I saw them in June as did Anna and John Dooley. Dool is up to his ears, as the School Department is moving his Audio-visual headquarters out to Jamaica Plain. My older daughter Patricia just moved out next to John in a lovely section of Westwood, Fairway Acres.

Met Art Murray at Kiwanis last week, looking well after a three week cruise along the Maine coast in his lovely 34-footer. He gave me the news that Tom Cavanagh has left Internal Revenue and has associated with a law firm in Boston, Taylor, Foley and Sullivan, of 101 Tremont Street, with whom Tom will specialize in Taxation, naturally, and both Estate Analysis and Planning. Then, three days later, didn't I find myself in the same row in church on the Cape with the same Arthur and his lovely wife. Brought them back to the house for coffee, of course. (Ed note: Arthur met a Dr. John Sullivan, '31, on that Maine cruise; another boater.)

Paul Sullivan, living in West Roxbury, is retiring from his long connection with the Navy and is too young to just loaf; he's looking into another category of work. John Dooley sent me a color snap of a terrazzo mosaic dedicated to Bill Cunningham, which photo he took in Hollywood on a recent tour which covered Hawaii, Vegas and Tijuana, among other spots. Of course, it was the former late columnist but it sure looked important.

Charlie Carroll of Hicksville, L.I. was recently appointed a Council member for a newly established State University College in Nassau County, in his home area; this by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. It'll have 10,000 students on a 500-acre campus. Nice recognition for banker Charlie.

And a late item just picked from our local Parkway Transcript tells of the marriage of Ellen M. Delahunt, Thomas Philip's daughter, to young Frank McCarthy of Roslindale, at South Weymouth. He's B.C., with a U.M. master's degree; she's U. Mass, too. Young McCarthy is an instructor at Boston State, where his dad, Dr. Frank, Sr., also B.C., is a professor. O.K., so there's not much news. Why don't you do something about it? See you round and about the Heights during the football season.

Director, Sports Publicity

FOOTBALL!

The 1966 edition of the Boston College Eagles is ready to kickoff another exciting football season. Since September 1st, Jim Miller and 82 gridiron candidates have been working hard in preparation for the September 17th opener with Navy.

For the first time in 35 years the football team held its pre-season training away from the Heights. The cozy confines of The Cranwell School in the picturesque Berkshires was the sight of the first 10 days of practice.

Captain Ed Lipson led a squad which has a nucleus of 26 lettermen. There are 30 sophomores, 30 juniors and 22 seniors in the group.

The 1966 schedule is attractive and challenging and the feeling is that with a few breaks, it could be another excellent season.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1966 — Several question marks in the make-up of the 1966 Eagles cause the forecasting of their football fortunes for the coming season to be somewhat difficult.

This is not to say that the potential for a good, solid team and the chance for another fine season, are not present. But rather that in the loss of 17 lettermen through graduation some key areas were hit hard. In the group of 17 are included the entire first unit defensive backfield and the number one offensive quarterback of the past two seasons. These are the two areas Jim Miller is most concerned with in the rebuilding phase. Miller also will be without three outstanding interior linemen and three top offensive ends. The of fensive end position is another major concern for 1966.

The coaching staff worked hard through Spring and early Fall practice to come up with the right combination in the defensive backfield and to decide upon the successor to Eddie Foley's quarterbacking position from several promising prospects and to develop some strength at offensive end from a group of sophomores who should be good ones. Most of these replacements have had little, if any, varsity game experience. Only after the first few games will a prediction of their performances be reliable.

The Eagles' strength for 1966 will be in their running backs and interior lines (offensively and defensively) where most of the 26 returning lettermen are found. The running backs, headed by big Brendan McCarthy at fullback, boast good speed, power, depth and experience. If they can be complimented by a potent passing quarterback, they will be that much more of a threat. The B.C. line will be big, strong, mobile and will have good depth.

Coach Miller plans to get deeper into the offensive and defensive platooning this season. He will have an offensive unit, a defensive unit and a third that will go either way. As the season wears on, and depending on the injury situation, Miller hopes to have his entire squad divided into offensive and defensive teams.

B.C.'s 1966 schedule is once again the best in New England and one of the better and more imposing schedules in the East. Kicking off the season with Navy at Annapolis will immediately provide more basis for prognostication for the remainder of the season.

New Eagle Quarterback? Dave "The Dart" Thomas, a 6'2", 202-lb. sophomore from Stamford, Conn., a potential All-American.

All-American hopeful Bob Hyland, a 6'5", 205-lb. senior guard from White Plains N.Y.

... AND AROUND THE CORNER ... B.C. BASKETBALL AND HOCKEY!

John "Snooks" Kelley will be starting his 30th year as Head Coach of the Boston College hockey team come October. The Dean of American College Hockey Coaches posted his 28th winning season (out of 29) and reached another memorable milestone in his amazing career last season when the Eagles recorded win No. 400 for him (on February 22, 1966 against Dartmouth). He has now compiled 402 wins against only 174 losses and 14 ties for a phenomenal percentage of .682. Would you believe that "Snooks" is already pointing to the 500 win mark?

His 1965-66 sextet, riddled by a rash of injuries to five key players, were hurting badly at mid-season but bounced back in typical Boston College tradition and roared down the stretch with 10 victories in the final 12 games and into their 5th consecutive E.C.A.C. playoff.

Coach John "Snooks" Kelley

Looking ahead to 1966-1967, the loss of six outstanding men through graduation will take a heavy toll on John Kelley's 30th edition of hockey at the Heights. Five of the six were starters and included in the group of the high scoring first line of the past two seasons headed by two-time All-America John Cunniff. However, Kelley has often turned these so called "off" years into pleasantly surprising years and don't bet against it in 1966-67.

Captain-elect Jerry York will lead an Eagle squad with 10 lettermen forming a nucleus from which to build. York led all B.C. scorers last season with 21 goals and 16 assists for 37 points. Paul "the Shot" Hurley, one of the better rushing defensemen in the college ranks, was right behind Jerry with 35 points (9 goals and 26 assists). He will be a junior as will forwards Whitey Allen and Gordie Clarke and defenseman Steve Dowling, all outstanding performers. Top seniors next season will be forwards Bob Kupka and Dick Fuller and big defenseman Woody Johnson. Jeff Cohen, who split the goal tending duties with Pat Murphy and played 15 fine games in the nets, will also return.

Most of the strength from last year's frosh sextet may be from behind the blue line. There should be enough promising prospects from Bernie Burke's boys to provide Coach Kelley with the depth necessary to record another winning season.

BASKETBALL . . .

BOB COUSY — The 1966-67 season ahead will mark Bob's 4th year as the coach of the Boston College basketball team. The incomparable "Cooz", who sparked the equally incomparable Boston Celtics to 6 World Championships in his last seven seasons, played in the N.B.A. for 13 years (and in 13 All-Star games). An All-America on the great Holy Cross teams of 1947-50, "Mr. Basketball" is now making his

Coach Bob Cousy

A three time All-America choice from International Falls, Minnesota will play his college hockey at the Heights. Tim Sheehy, holder of a national record, scoring three goals in 31 seconds, chose Boston College, because in his words "it is a Jesuit school and one of the nation's outstanding hockey colleges." His three season total of 114 goals and 120 assists led his school to three straight Minnesota titles.

Tim Sheehy

mark as one of college basketball's more brilliant young mentors. Bob has upped his record from 10-11 his first season (1963-64) to 22-7 (1964-65) and finally a fantastic 21-5 record this past season, including a second straight N.I.T. bid and an excellent team showing in the Madison Square Garden's Christmas Festival as well. This gives Bob a rather enviable total of 53 wins against 23 losses for a healthy percentage of .697.

Looking ahead to 1966-67, Boston College could be in for still another outstanding hoop season with a couple of "ifs" thrown in. The greatest basketball player in the history of the school thus far, John Austin, has graduated; so has Captain Ed Hockenbury. All-America Austin rewrote the scoring record book in his 3-year varsity career. He averaged 28 point a game overall and won countless games with his storybook heroics. Hockenbury was the team's playmaker who sparked the now famous B.C. fast break the past 2 seasons. Needless to say, they'll not be easily replaced.

However, a solid nucleus will return headed by Captain-elect Willie Walters a 6-8 center whose rebounding ranks with the best in the country and Steve Adelman a 6-5 cornerman who was sensational as a sophomore averaging 30 points a game over the second half of the season. A host of capable backcourt men return led by 6-2 Doug Hice, 6-0 Jack Kvanetz and 6-2 Steve Kelleher. Hice will be a senior, the others juniors and all played well last year. The "Cooz" should have a strong bench and will inherit 2 sophomores-to-be who have tremendous potential. They are 6-7 forward Terry Driscoll who averaged 30 points on the frosh five and Bill Evans a 5-11 backcourt man who should develop quickly into a standout field general.

Thus, "if" any two of several potentially outstanding players can pick up the slack left by Austin and Hockenbury, and "if" the new starting five can jell quickly against an imposing schedule, Bob Cousy and his Eagles will continue to soar.

His Honor, Jerry Sullivan, is a judge in Nantucket County and not in Plymouth as previously reported. Now, your honor, please suspend the sentence.

'28 JOHN M. BARRY
40 Richmond St., W. Roxbury

I know it says on the masthead of the Alumni News that it is published three times a year, but those notes from Thomas O'C. Murray roll in so often that it seems he slips an extra issue in now and then just to keep us off balance.

We did pick up some notes about these persons who got out in 1928—but we did it the hard way by putting a finger in the dial and telephoning. Apropos the telephone calls, it is a matter of interest to me that I never seem to get the adults in the family when I call late at night. It's always the sons and daughters. I thought by this time they would be sitting on the front porch, rocking placidly, but not so. They are always "out to dinner."

Gene Plociennik was a home though. His youngest daughter, and last at home, was married to Bevin Boyd who is a senior at Bishop's University in Quebec. (There's some vague note here about Santiago throwing a two-hitter for the Red Sox. Anybody know a man named Santiago in the class?) . . . Frank Phelan was out but his daughter, Kathy, told me she is a sophomore at Newton College of the Sacred Heart. She speaks in the pleasant tone of her father . . . Norman Steele was relaxing on vacation, but the conversation was a trifle disconnected and interrupted—he was suffering from a case of poison ivy. Norman's son was married recently in Los Angeles . . . I was curious about Dr. George Lyons in Roslindale. I remembered he was a doctor in the navy in WW II attached to the Marines, and I wondered if he was in now. He's not, but in the reserve and if things get any worse! . . .

Within a few weeks Arthur I. (Pete) Morrisey, the mayor of North Redington Beach on Florida's Gulf Coast, should be heading north to stand on the sidelines and watch fall football practice. Someone had better tell him that Mr. Miller's young men will be training at Cranwell Preparatory in Lenox for the Navy game. If Pete came up and found the practice field deserted, the shock would be too much for him . . . It's a long time since we have heard from Gene Sullivan, but someone up in Springfield said he is with the Moore Drop Forging. Gene is a former selectman in Wales (not the How Green was My Valley Wales). This one is in Massachusetts.

The reception for Fr. Martin Harney, S.J. celebrating his 50th year in the Society of Jesus was memorable. St. Ignatius' Church was filled for the Mass, and the truly extraordinary number of 1400-plus at McElroy congratulated Fr. Harney. John McDevitt, '28, spoke simply but movingly of the deep affection that all of us have for Father Harney. There were many from the class there. The persons I saw—Vaic Newton and Ann, Norman Steele, Maurice Downey, Dr. Joe McCarthy and Margaret from Concord, N.H., Dr. Joe Lynch from Foxboro, Tom O'Brien from Athol, Dan Driscoll, Bill Harrington, Owen Dooley and Alice, Frank Phelan, Mal McLeod and Emory Zirpolo and his wife.

And after the item I carried about Emory in the last issue it was a shock to have him grab me by the shoulder. I thought my time was here and he had come back for me! As Mark Twain said, "The report . . . is greatly exaggerated."

That was a very pleasant wedding and reception . . . Dick Condon's daughter, Ellen, to John Cunningham '66. Dick has one daughter left at home, my friend, Ann Marie. Richard earned a Master's degree at Babson Institute.

Going back to Fr. Harney and the Jesuits who taught us in those years from 1924 to 1928 . . . we owe them so much. It's a warmth that can't be put into words without being sentimental.

Well, what's wrong with being sentimental?

Truly those men in the black robes were an honor roll of good teachers and fine men. The names come rolling back. Fr. Pat McHugh, the gentle, soft-spoken man for whom McHugh Forum is named; Fr. Fitzpatrick who would look with bewilderment upon today's outspoken, uninhibited students; Fr. Dan Cronin who took over a rebellious rough-riding freshman section at mid-year and infused into us both a sudden maturity and the fear of the Lord; Fr. Dan Lynch and those really extraordinary lectures in Physics; Fr. Harney who could be switched without trouble from the boring succession of English royalty to light tales of the Irish countryside. And as he went on his brogue got thicker! Fr. Frank Sullivan and the then—Mr.—McCarthy, my cousin, who is still at the Heights. Fr. Jones I. J. Corrigan and Fr. John Creeden in senior year. Fr. McCloskey, the man in the next room, who disdained attacking the old antagonists and spent his time refuting and rebutting anything that Fr. Boehm said in his lectures.

Ah! that Fritz Boehm, lecturer in philosophy. Tall, broad-shouldered, gruff of voice, supremely confident in the old Teutonic tradition of the Hohenzollerns. For some reason I could never understand why he would focus those cold eyes on me when he got started. (I could never understand why—I had no thought whatever of disagreeing with him.) ing I could get in touch with Frank Murphy who has been with the paper since he left the United Press. And speaking of that press service, Martin Kane, Associate Editor on Sports Illustrated, left recently for Kenya to meet the Coach of the Kenya track team. After a trip to Athens, he went to Frankfurt to cover the Clay-Mildenberger fight. After seeing the Brian London thing, Martin could probably do better than either of those fellows.

And about coaches, I was there the night John Kelley's hockey team won the 400th game. He deserved every one of them. A truly fine person.

Jack Doherty's daughter, Joan, is teaching in Boston, while John, Jr. is with the Telephone Company.

In looking through this year's Senior Class yearbook I read with interest the names of those getting their degrees from the Evening College. They, going four nights a week for six years, deserve tremendous credit. They did it the hard way. So to them—from the first, Richard W. Avery of Brighton to the last, John S. Yocum of Chelmsford—Welcome to the Alumni Group. We wish you well.

And as a final word—thanks to the anonymous person who sent to this address two bottles of champagne. The note read, "To the Class Correspondent of 1928."

We have lost another classmate and good friend, Ed Connaughton. The sympathy of the class is extended to Ed's wife and son. Please remember Ed in your prayers and also several ill classmates.

Paul Broderick wrote in June from 3730 September Court, Castro Valley, California with some information for an alumnus who wanted to teach there. Paul is finding his job at Chabot College extremely interesting, teaching Psychology and Educational and Vocational Planning plus Counseling for 15 hours. "Never a dull moment."

Henry Keenan also wrote from his school "Andrew Jackson" in Santa Ana for the same alumnus with teaching credential material, in a very encouraging vein saying that New High Schools and Junior High Schools are going up all around. "California anyone." Henry sent best wishes to all. His new address is 1302 El Finito Way, Santa Ana, California 92705.

Doctor Jim Hennessey's doctor son is interning at Saint Elizabeth's hospital where Jim is on the staff.

Talked with Leo Shea in Hyannis where he has opened a second Real Estate office. He had been on the Jersey Shore the week before while visiting his son, Father Leo Shea M.M. and who knows "Shea" may soon be handling all the Atlantic Coast real estate. Those of you who attended Father Leo's first Solemn Mass in Melrose I am sure were deeply impressed. Preacher Father Leo O'Keefe S.J. was terrific as usual and Father Leo Shea gives promise of being a great priest and missionary. He is currently assigned to recruiting more young men for Maryknoll in the Philadelphia area, but he did get time to celebrate a Nuptial Mass for his sister Maureen, Regis class of 1964 and John Dolan, Georgetown class of 1964 in July. John is a naval officer stationed in Bermuda.

Speaking of our priests: Tonight I met Father T. Augustus Fay S.J. — (remember him as Prefect of Discipline?) who told me that Father Thomas P. Fay S.J. class of 1929 will be coming to the Immaculate Conception Church shortly.

And Joe Cavanagh told me that Father Joe Mahoney is now pastor of Saint Patrick's, Natick, (Is that right?) making a strong outland of 1929er's with Father Joe Regan pastor of Saint George's, Saxonville and Father Fred Hobbs, pastor of Saint Zepherian's in Cohituate. Father Jim McNamara is in Quincy and Father Frank McDonnell (did you know he marched in Selma?) is in West Lynn.

Talked with Frank Cadigan one day this summer in East Brewster on the Cape. He sends best wishes.

Also talked with Ed Keefe who is Superintendent of Schools in Nashua, New Hampshire.

Bill and Ernestine LaFay toured Europe this summer with their son Father Emanuel, a Carmelite; at least they visited Rome, London, Paris and various other places in Spain and Portugal.

See General G. McCarthy at the 4 P.M. Mass Saturday at the Immaculate Conception where if no altar boy is present he steps forward and serves the Mass, oh to be so agile!

Got an Assistant lately from John Landriano who is head of English Department at Boston Latin. John's son Dick, class of 1966 was at University of New Mexico preparing for a Peace Corps assignment in Chile. Phil who is at Harvard Medical is marrying a B.C. Alumna, Mary McGee.

Saw Bill Walsh at a wedding anniversary. He is fine, operates his own office supply business out of Dedham.

Have heard that Chris Mungoon, class of 1966 just got married before taking off for active duty.

Jim Regans' daughter Ann (a Sister of Charity of Halifax) graduated from Mount Saint Vincent University this year. Jim is in Stocks and Bonds with F. L. Putnam Company.

You all probably see Henry M. Leen Jr.'s byline on very interesting "Pilot" news stories.

Vin Robert's daughter, Sister Mary Saint Vincent of the Sister of Saint Clare writes enthusiastically from her Monastery in Japan. Bill Ruberts' youngest has graduated from Providence College in June and is working with Honeywell in Data Processing.

Pat Hurley's second son received a B.S. in Civil Engineering from Northeastern University on June 19.

Had a call from Frank O'Brien with job opportunity's from summer — who got one but a student from Tanzania. Thanks Frank.

Peter Buck received his B.S. in accounting in June from Boston College and is working with one of the big "eight" public accounting firms.

I'm sure that there were other sons and or daughters. Would appreciate a phone call or note for the next issue of Alumni news about yourselves, families, classmates.

Peggy Martin (John's daughter) nursing school class of 1966 is going to Saint Mary's Alaska as a lay apostle along with another nurse and four teachers until June 1967.

Our usual May meeting was not held this year because the Alumni Association wanted a large turnout for the new Style Alumni a refutable statement, let it hang in the air for a while, while you examine the man. What are his mental disciplines, his background, his environment, his prejudices? How far has he allowed personal frustration, antagonism and bitterness to twist and distort his reasoning? When you have analyzed him and held him wriggling on the tip of your mental lance, then let him down gently and go after his statement. But be gentle when you demolish him. It is his mind you are attacking, not his pride."

The best teacher I had and, literally, the only person I have ever met who had the absolute power to frighten the hell out of me!

Well now, Bill earned a Bachelor's degree this June joining Jack, '58 and Stephen '62, with only Paula '68 still at it. That will be it, and believe me, they didn't put Medicare in too soon. (I hope Dr. Arthur Gorman '26 sees that. And just as a kindly word—never, never allow yourself to sit beside him at a football or hockey game. He may have slowed down a trifle but his voice still has a paralyzing effect.)

Charley Driscoll's daughter, Mary Ellen '66, will go to Africa with the Lay Apostolate, while Dan Driscoll's son, Dan '66, has joined the Peace Corps. I have deep admiration for these kids. They're solid.

Both Dan Driscoll and Dick Condon made a trip to Ireland, though not together. That would be too much for a peace-loving people to take. They were both shrewd enough to avoid being there on July 12, Orangeman's Day. Since the Battle of Boyne Water was fought 292 years ago, wouldn't you think that the Rev. Paisley and his bully boys would begin thinking of laying down the cudgels?

I telephoned the Providence Journal hop-

Day — and a class meeting in May seemed like too much Competition. We are sorry more of you didn't make the Alumni Day Pops Concert and Dinner Dance. Then Tom McGrath has been kept hopping as Operation Manager of Logan. Have you been over there lately? We hope to have a dinner this Fall.

A Solemn Mass of Requiem was offered in St. Margaret Church, Lowell on Tuesday, July 5, for Rev. Daniel F. Sullivan, Pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Groton. Fr. Sullivan died suddenly on June 30 at Boston City Hospital following a heart attack. Bishop Thomas J. Riley, presided at the Solemn funeral Mass. To the family of Fr. Sullivan, the class extends its sincere sympathy.

'30 JOHN F. DWYER
45 Belvoir Rd., Milton, Mass.

On Alumni Day, Charles F. Murphy retired as President and Dr. Garrett Sullivan as Secretary of the Boston College Alumni Association.

John F. Groden is now a partner in the Law firm of Withington, Cross, Park & Groden at 73 Tremont St., Boston. Thanks to Fred Lyons for this news note. Attorney James Regan of Belmont joined the Oakley Country Club.

The sincere sympathy of his classmates is extended to David E. Hockman upon the death of his wife, Mary R. Requiem Funeral Mass was offered July 21 at St. Peters Church in Cambridge.

Dr. Garrett Sullivan scored a hole-in-one at White Sulphur Springs, Virginia on May 30.

The sincere sympathy of his classmates is extended to the family of the late Thomas Killion.

At the 71st annual convention of the International Apple Association, Edward J. O'Neill was unanimously elected President for the year 1965-1966 and was also named appleman of the year. Ed's reputation in the apple business is not limited to the United States for he is well known in many foreign countries, in connection with apple exports from J. P. Sullivan & Co. of Groton, the firm in which he is a partner.

After graduation from Boston College in '30, Ed attended Law School there for 3 years. Shortly thereafter he went into the fruit business with J. P. Sullivan & Co. He recently celebrated his 30th Anniversary with the firm. Ed lived in Groton for 28 years and still owns an apple orchard there. His home is currently in Lincoln, Mass. with his wife Teresa. They have two children, Mrs. John E. Ferren of South Acton and a son Edward, Jr., along with two grandchildren. Thanks to Ed's daughter, Mrs. John E. Ferren, for this write-up information.

The golfers coveted this summer as follows: Charlie Murphy at Hatherly; John E. Hurley, Tom Kelly and John Foley at Wollaston and John Haverty at North Gate Country Club in Duxbury.

The John Havertys vacationed at Mt. Tremblant Lodge in the Canadian Laurentians.

The reunion in April was a great success; there were over eighty in attendance at the consecrated Mass in Gonzaga Hall Chapel, the buffet at Alumni Hall, and at the forum at St. Theresa's in West Roxbury. The Weston College singers provided us with a "folksong" Mass which seemed to be appreciated by most of us. The Bishop was joined by Msgr. Meehan and Frs. Norton and Pearsall from the Class in the celebration. A new experience for almost all of us. The ensuing reception and buffet gave us the opportunity to welcome to the reunion regulars the Joe Bradleys, assorted Careys and Ceseys, Bill Devlins, the John Finnertys, the Bill Helfriches, the Charlie Kelleys and the Bernie Trums. It is unnecessary to add that the Bishop's talk at the forum was as informative and well stated as usual.

Several of the members attended the alumni weekend festivities and found them enjoyable.

Joe McCook has left Springfield, we understand, for Florida.

The Mike Currans visited their daughter in Germany.

The Aarons and Healeys met while vacationing in Nova Scotia.

The Tom Crosbys are gaining a couple of sons by marriage.

Our Class recently lost one of our most courageous and most colorful classmates in Joe Merrick, who passed away after many years of determination to lick all odds. After a Solemn Requiem Mass at St. Ignatius Church, his body was buried at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Fathers Jack Fogarty and Bill Noonan, Frank Brow, Bill Carr, Dan O'Keefe, Neal Holland, Jim Sullivan, and your correspondent, all enjoyed the sun, sand, and the salt water. You should give it a try, the price is right.

Once again, if you become a grandfather, or retire to Florida, or any other news item befalls you, send it along, please.

See you at the football games.

The sincere condolences of the class are extended to Pete McCauley on the death of his mother who passed away at the age of ninety-five years.

Peter retired from the Massachusetts State Police after 30 years of service.

Rev. David (Neil) Bulman, C.P., Rev. John Aleckna, C.P., and Rev. Jim Hart celebrated their Silver Jubilee of ordination into the priesthood.

Dr. John E. Burke is Boston's Federal Consultant for the Serel Social Studies program.

The hospitality of the John Griffin family at his home in Eastham for our 31st anniversary blast in May was unbounded. The invitation and reservation letter written by Ed Sullivan was a classic in hilarity, and those who didn't or couldn't make the scene were the losers. Jim Sullivan snapped the golf trophy, the inscription on which was of questionable merit, and the donor of which will remain unnamed. But 35'ers being honest if nothing else, it must be stated that he didn't win his four ball match. A telegram was received during this Cape Cod luau from Bill Giblin from Monte Carlo. Wished he could have been there, and those who were could blame him not.

Ed Mitchell is President of B. & B. Chemical Company, Cambridge.

36 JOSEPH P. KEATING

Natick, Mass.

Deepest sympathy and prayers of the class are offered to the families of Father John Hausman, Warren MacMillan and Brent Gordon.

Congratulations to all of them and very best wishes from the class.

Monsignor Larry Riley has been appointed pastor of the Church of Most Precious Blood in Hyde Park. Bishop Ed Lawton of Charleston and Nigeria continues to contribute his aid and influence in helping Nigeria settle down to independence. We are all anxious to see the slide of a picture taken of Dr. Ford with all the lovely ladies present. Many of the Jubilarians were unable to attend this social.

All the Jubilarians had their own private celebrations in their own parishes in the month of May. Many of our classmates were invited to Fr. Kielty's celebration held at the Sacred Heart Parish Hall in Watertown. A surprised guest was Johnnie Keary, the F.B.I. special investigator from the New Bedford area. He and Mrs. Keary looked just wonderful. They are looking forward to his retirement and the opening of his private law practice. The best of luck, John.

Capt. Charles A. Iarrobino of Chestnut Hill received the Joint Services Commendation Medal from Rear Admiral Ray S. Benson for his services on the Staff of the Joint Chiefs. Cat. Jay Bragan, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bragan has joined the Marine Corps.

John Feeney has moved to 40 Unity St., Quincy.

Since this coming year is our 30th anniversary, it has been suggested that one of the functions should be a testimonial to the sixteen priests that will have marked their Silver Jubilee as priests in the Archdiocese, namely: Mons. Senott, Mons. Quirk, Rev. H. Barry, Rev. J. Kielty, Rev. J. McDonough, Rev. W. McDonough, Rev. D. Hannigan, Rev. F. Palmieri, Rev. L. Burke, Rev. D. Burke, Rev. P. McManus, Rev. G. Gray, Rev. D. O'Leary, Rev. T. Moriarty, Rev. R. Brennan and Rev. W. Anderson.

Steve Witham's two sons are graduates of Villanova University.

Arthur Ciampa of Quincy was elected President of the Inter-Agency Council of the South Shore. He's executive director of the United Cerebral Palsy Drive, So. Shore Area.

Ben and Marie Hines are certainly enjoying their new home in Marshfield. Between his post at New Haven Railroad, Ben finds time to be a special Lecturer at Chamberlayne Junior College.

I regret to inform you of the death of Rev. McCarthy, brother of Joe McCarthy; Rev. Ernie Ford, brother of Dr. Fred Ford; the mother of Dr. Joe Shapiro and the mother-in-law of Jack Burgess. May they rest in peace.

Since this is a Jubilee Year, please forward to me any ideas relative to the success of this occasion.

While traveling through Portland, Maine in business Jim O'Hare came upon sad news for the class. John P. Connolly, of that city, was stricken on the golf course August 7. Jim visited the funeral home and met John's wife Mary and 4 children. He planned to attend the services the following day. John, a native of Portland, was in the oil business. To John's wife and family we extend our sincere sympathy. Also from Jim we learned that Father Al Gibbons had recently undergone a serious operation and was going to recuperate at his home in Revere. Jim intended to see Father Al's brother who also lives in Portland, for further details. To him we wish a speedy recovery. In his letter Jim also said that he expects to be a grandfather around the first of September. Dan Barry is back again this summer at the Hotel Belmont as general manager. While watching the Baltimore Cleveland pro Football game the other night, we could not help thinking how proud John Morris would have been to see a former protege of his at Boston Technical — Dan Sullivan a former B.C. Star and first string offensive guard for the Colts. During the summer we met Leo Downs at the East Boston Airport where he was seeing his daughter off for Ireland. Three 38ers had daughters graduated from Fontbonne Academy in Milton last June — Ruth True, Jim Casey's Virginia, and Marty Mahoney's Mary. Jim Regan will have 2 boys at B.C. this year, Jim Jr., a senior and Mark a sophomore. Tom True III will be a junior and Jack Gately's son Peter enters senior year. Al Connolly would like to remind the former students and friends of Father Matthew Donovan, S.J. that the date of his Golden Jubilee celebration is Sunday, October

2. Mass will be at noon in St. Mary's Church, Boston, a reception and buffet following. A dinner will be tendered him that evening in Lyons Hall B.C. at 5 P.M. District Fire Chief Frank Finnegan recently led a delegation to New York to attend the New York Fireman's Ass'n. Communion Breakfast. Paul Benzaquin, moderator of a popular radio telephone program often consults Frank Hunt for advise in regard to VA problems. At last June's B.C. graduation Jim O'Hare's son Mr. James O'Hare Jr., S.J. accepted the degree for the school of Arts & Sciences. Also in that class were Dick Canavan's daughter, who is entering the convent and Dr. Fred Landigan's son. The sympathy of the class is extended to Jim Casey whose mother (Joe Hartigan's aunt) passed away recently. Dr. Dick Stanton and Bill Finan again represented the class of '38 on the Laetare Sunday Communion Breakfast committee. Dick was on vacation in Florida at that time and Bill did an excellent job making arrangements. Dr. Arthur Buckley is working for the Development Fund in his home area — New Bedford. Art recently had Brendan McCarthy B.C.'s All-American Fullback candidate as a weekend guest at his home.

'38' was well represented at Father Joe Shea, S.J. B.C. High Rector's Dinner — Bob Power, Al Connelly, Jim Brown, Tom True, Gerry Jones, Father Leo Pollard, S.J. and Father Frank McCarthy, S.J. Dean at the High School had recently broken his leg and could not attend.

Tom O'Connor now lives in Garden City, New York. He is consultant for the Equitable Life Insurance Company at its main office. Tom has four children, Tom, Jr. and Jack attend Fordham University, Anne is at Post College and Mary is a high school Junior. In the notes turned in at the last class dinner. John Drome reported that he is "still" married to Father Larry Mullin, S.J.'s sister Gene, 4 children and is "still" associate director of the Harvard College Fund.

Thirty-nine in the van as usual! With all the current emphasis on Medic-three and Medic-four, don't overlook the Medic-five system we have going in the top Class office. Dr. Al Branca stepped down as president at the Class meeting in June. He was succeeded by Dr. Frank Sennott for the 1966-1967 term and Dr. Gene McAuliffe backs him up as vice-president.

Ed Hall succeeded himself as financial secretary. Tom Turman, continuing correspondent, would like to succeed in expanding the lineage in these notes and so inserts his plaintive plea for news here rather than in the peroration.

One item overlooked earlier is that Fr. John Lawler, a curate at St. Bridgid's Church, South Boston, is a major in the Air Force Reserve. He is a chaplain attached to HQ-Air Force Systems Command and also manages to log civilian air time in his Beechcraft Bonanza.

We aren't really certain that George Lyons has swapped Navy blue for houndstooth Norfolk jacket and shooting stick but the fact of the matter is he is Commander, U.S.N. (ret.), as of this April past. He is experimenting with tomatoes, turnips and such on his Marshfield acreage now and quite willing to talk about his five boys, the oldest of whom will graduate from high school next year. Bill Holland is also quite willing to admit, without duress, that the captain of the Boston Latin School football team this year is his son, Ed.

Working from the South Shore to the Cape we can report that Arthur Fleming has completed his seventh season as owner and operator of The Donut Shack in North Eastham. Art teachers in the Boston school system and the five younger Flemings are equally active. Susan, Emmanuel alumnae and candidate for the Master's degree in Drama at Catholic University, toured Europe with a USO troupe this summer. Jane, June graduate of Boston State College, has been appointed to the Boston school system and Paul is at St. John's Prep. Two other daughters are at Girls Latin School in Boston.

Out of state, Ken Devine was appointed Assistant Superintendent of Schools in Rye Neck, Mamaroneck, New York on July 1 after a turn as principal of the high school there. His eldest, Kevin, entered Stanford University this fall and his youngest, Christopher, entered grade 3. The girls in between, Kathleen and Maureen, are members of the senior and sophomore classes, respectively, at Mamaroneck High School.

In Falls Church, Virginia, Merle Carey has taken his stand, with his family of course. Merle was a graduate from the United

JOHN J. HANRIHAN, '25 ED CONNOLLY, '52

States Military Academy at West Point in the Class of 1943, was decorated several times for exploits in Europe, and in Korea where he commanded a tank battalion. He was on the faculty of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth and also at West Point before retiring as a colonel three years ago. Son Chris entered Dartmouth this year and Jonathan is in high school. Merle is a registered representative with Alex Brown & Sons, brokers in Washington, D.C.

Back home again, John Roddy bids fair to become the Mr. Chips, or so he alleges, of the Williams College School of Banking summer faculty. He taught there again this year as well as being Counsel, between times, for Massachusetts Bankers Association and practising law in Boston. We hope mention herein will not have put the whammy on the political aspirations of one of our classmates but, in any case, at press time Peter Kerr is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governors Council in the 2nd District. At other times Pete is in the legal department of N. E. Tel. & Tel., in Boston. A lieutenant commander in the United States Coast Guard Reserve he has been assigned to represent that seagoing agency on the Selective Service (Record) Activity.

Frank Brennan, President, Union Savings Bank of Boston, has been elected Chairman of the Boston Group of Mutual Savings Banks for the year 1966-1967.

The incumbent in the corresponding secretary's office could use some support, too, such as a status report from/about Thirtyniners who haven't been cited in these dispatches lately. Postage collect, if need be!

Up-staged and off-centered by the anniversary classes, our activities connected with the recent Commencement Week equalled, if not surpassed, last year's top draw events. No command performances, no social musts, only the anticipation of a repeat of the good times of last year was the drawing magnet. Those who came were not disappointed. From the kick-off weekend at Wianno, to the family Communion Dinner at the Heights, the program was a wonderful success. A tip of an over-sized ten gallon hat is due Tom Cudmore and Bill Joy, and their several committees for the effort that went into making celebration most enjoyable.

Mention of Wianno brings to mind the highlight of another wonderful event on the social calendar, the induction of the President of the college, Father Walsh, as a member of the class of 1940. The presentation of the diploma and the reading of the degree was held at a dishonest confrontation in the hotel ballroom. Father John Dacey, obviously delighted to be reading and discoursing in Latin again, outdid himself on this occasion. Dave Lucy was also presented his football shirt from Wake Forest at this convocation. There is still some doubt that Father Dacey, still awed by his return to Latin, translated correctly the words, Wake Forest. Many claim it should be primeval forest. Sitting as a board of regents for the occasion, but looking more like a board of rejects were Bill Joy, Tom Cudmore, and Henry Desmond. With the football season now on us, wonder if I can use our distinguished classmate's name, not Lucy, when I approach the ticket office and inquire if there are any seats left other than row 5 in the end zone?

Speaking of football, those of you who plan to take in the Penn State game, if the military units parade, keep a weather eye for Henry Schmidt. Henry, a Captain in the U.S. Navy, is stationed at the Pennsylvania college.

Back on the beach, where this column was being shaped up, while watching the rubber mattress set, and listening on the radio to the furor about the surfers at our local beaches, it came to mind that we have one acknowledged surfing addict in the class. Frank Zona, calling San Matteo, California, home base for his thriving insurance agency, informs me that young Frank is an accomplished surfer, and can "hang ten" on a surf board. Frank and wife, Doris, are very active in the C.F.M. and C.C.D. movements in their local parish.

If you were inconvenienced by the recent airline strike and are in need of sympathy, don't look up Joe McKenney. Joe, as Director of Public Relations for the American League Baseball Clubs, found himself in St. Louis, Missouri, for the All-Star baseball game back in July, at the time of that torrid and tragic heat wave. Not only did the American League come in second, but Joe and his party found themselves stranded at the airport. With an eye on the pun, I can report that the Gillette Razor people, using some sharp public relations, bailed out Joe and his group by letting them use the keen-looking company plane for the return trip to Boston.

Businessman in nearby Cambridge by profession, and sports enthusiast by avocation, Vito Ananis still finds time to keep his hand in on his first love, football. Vito recently signed on to handle the coaching duties of the Brighton Knights, a top flight semi-pro team in local and New England competition.

For Tom Cross, now in South Carolina, John Roark, out in California, Paul Dufely in Pennsylvania, Father John Banks last heard of in Baghdad, and Major Jim Stewart in far off (by street car) West Roxbury, all part of the crowd from Southie, it's nice to report nice things about nice people which is to say that Larry Howe is now living in Wollaston. The Howes have five youngsters. The older two, Brian and Bob, are students here at the Heights. Brian is in his senior year, while Bob graduates next year. Like Larry, both boys are well versed in sports. Brian is a former footballer for Father Joe Shea's young Eagles at B.C. High, while Bob played golf for the same school. Larry is an electrical engineer for the Boston Edison Company.

Didn't mention the results of the golf tournament at Wianno because I didn't, and you wouldn't, believe the scores; however, I will report that the squire of Kingston, Pat Rafferty, is one of the most respected golfers in the state amateur circles. Most recent outing was the State Amateur championship tournament. Pat buses himself as Vice-President in charge of New England sales for the National Securities and Research Corporation located here in Boston. Incidentally, the handicap is ten.

Also in the papers as a starter in the recent Tobin Memorial tournament at Hatherly Country Club was Henry Desmond. When he's not searching out timid, bashful classmates to attend class functions, Henry is selling insurance for the Home Insurance Company.

Made a promise not to mention the names of the Wianno partygoers if only to stir up the curiosity of the stay-at-homeers and perhaps bring them out to the next affair. But here we go breaking the promise by thanking Dr. Ezio Tesone for the showing of his slides of our anniversary get together last year. Everyone enjoyed them. Which brings us to the reason we mentioned the slides. Another slides enthusiast, Dr. John Goodman, dentist by vocation, and antique car buff by avocation, spent the greater part of last year's round-up shooting pictures at the various events. Benny was asked to show the pictures, and someone borrowed them. Now, whoever has the slides, will you please get them back to their owner. And, if you come across Henry McMahon's top hat, still missing, that too will be appreciatively received.

Since the last issue of the News, word has been received from Anaheim, California, that Leon Roy died in that city on May 13. At the time of his death, Leon was the executive director of the Catholic Big Brothers of Los Angeles and Orange Counties in California. One of Doc Fitzgibbons sociology majors, Leon won the respect of his classmates with his soft-spoken, cheerful, and quietly persuasive attitude. His death comes as a shock to those of us who knew he had undergone major surgery over a year ago, and believed that he had recovered completely. We extend the deepest sympathy of the class to his wife, Louise, his two children, David, 15, and Suzanne, 13, and his brother, Father Gregory Roy, S.J., a member of the faculty here at Boston College. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Msgr. Francis J. Lally, editor of The Pilot, was awarded an honorary doctor of divinity degree at the Northeastern University commencement in June.

'41 HENRY J. SHEEHAN
6 Crescent Ave., Newton Centre

Admist the festivities of its twenty-fifth anniversary, the class of 1941 took time out to mourn the untimely death of Bill Houlihan, and express its deepest sympathy to his widow, Conchita, and his daughter, Maureen. Jim Murray, Paul True, Dave Merrick, Tom McDonald, Dick Daley and your correspondent served as pallbearers at Bill's funeral. Bill had worked hard as a member of the anniversary committee and was looking forward eagerly to the June get-together. Requiescat in pace.

Thanks to the inspired direction of Chairman Arthur Jones, with able assistance from Dick Daley, Ed Burke, Nick Sottile, Dr. Harry Fulchino, Paul True, Fran Blouin, and others just as dedicated, the whole program starting with the Stag Night in October and including the dinner-dance in February and the gatherings at the Heights in June, it was a huge success.

Larry Connors, Dr. Jim Wall, Dr. Mike Salomone, Dr. Harry Fulchino, John Jensen, Sam Colamaria, John Hayes, Al Nyren, Ralph Ryan, Dr. George Tully, Elmer Ross, Dr. Bill White, Dr. George McManama, Dick Daley, Ike Jones, Fran Blouin, Harry Boltz and Frank McSweeney, Bob Morris, Gene Goodreault, Henry Hamrock, Paul Reardon, Dan Regan, Jack Brady, Bernie Frazier, Jack Mulroy, Herb Arnold, Dr. Jack Burns, Tom Donelin, Fred Jaquith, Bill Foley, Bill Maguire and Paul Carlin.

Except for a few out of towners and bachelors Carlin, Rados and Stotie, all of the above attended with their charming wives.

Adding to the turnout were our respected clergy classmates, Msgrs. Joe Maguire, George Kerr, Tom Finnegan, John Kinchla, Fathers Ed Cowhig, Jim Radochia, Gene Brissette, John Connors and Jim Rogers.

Chief Marshal Tom Galligan led the Commencement parade, along with fellow marshals Fran Blouin, Ed Burke, Harry Boltz, Bob Rados, Paul Reardon, Arthur Jones, Jack Colahan and Jim Murray. The group was later present at the President's reception for them and the recipients of honorary degrees.

One of the highlights of the weekend was the Baccalaureate Mass celebrated by 1941 classmates Msgr. John Broderick, newly named rector of St. John's Seminary was Msgr. Joe Maguire, secretary to Cardinal Cushing, and Msgr. Tom Finnegan, vice-chancellor of the archdiocese.

In attendance at the champagne dinner dance were Robert Buck and George Donaldson, members of the faculty while we were struggling undergraduates. Father Edward Douglas, S.J. was on hand for the week-end and mingled with his former students of '41 John Norton, retiring this year, was present at the general alumni luncheon on Saturday.

Following Baccalaureate services on Sunday, Major Francis Dolan, on the staff and faculty of the Chaplain School in N.Y. was seen renewing old acquaintances. Probably the one coming the furthest distance was Jack Mulroy who was on from California. Jack had further cause to be proud since he was accompanied by his Dad, a member of the Class of 1902. Jack has two of his family at Pomona College, son Tom, a junior in Zoology, and daughter Juliana, a freshman. By coincidence, Jack's wife is an alumna of the same institution.

A face not seen around these parts for, 10, these twenty-five years was that of Paul Reardon, now a long time Chicagoan. Paul, the father of a daughter and four sons, is an auditor and tax consultant and is attached to the staff of Lasalle Extension University. He is the author of works in the fields of finance, accounting, commercial law and taxation. A loyal alumnus, Paul hopes to route all his boys to B.C.

Another of the returnees was John Hayes, who is a salesman for the Rome Cable Division of Alooa and is residing in New York City. John's 22 year old son John is manager-supervisor for Revere Copper & Brass in Rome, Italy while daughter Elaine is a student at Oswego State College.

Bill Foley, looking not a pound heavier, advises us that he is still engaged in social work, being a consultant in Newark, New Jersey, a school for dropouts. The proud father of six. Bill's girl Regina attends Caldwell College for Women. We have learned that Dr. George Casserly for the past fifteen years has been an eminent ophthalmologist and eye surgeon in San Pedro, California and has recently completed a course in plastic surgery in Austria.

A sight for sore eyes (speaking of same) at the reunion was Bob Morris, a veteran teacher at South Boston High and the father of three.

Joe O'Reilly one of the '41ers top scholars of year, is now a successful building contractor. Joe has four children, of whom Kathleen is at Carney Hospital School of Nursing and son Paul is an undergrad at Providence. Still another familiar face was Jack Bagley who is an FBI agent stationed in New York. Jack has four children including a son enrolled at the University of Dayton. Reminiscing with all his old cronies was Henry Hamrock currently a resident of Long Island, New York, a tycoon in the medical supplies business and the father of a large and splendid family.

Still youthful appearing and handsome, although a little sparser on top, was Harry Boltz, now once again residing in his old home town of Syracuse. Harry is still in the airline business and prospering.

Paul McGrath's wife Jane writes from Omaha that Paul, assistant to the President of Leo A. Daly Co. in that city, at the time of writing was on his third trip around the world in the past two years. Most of his time is spent in India and Pakistan, with some time spent in Afganistan, Nepal, Thailand, Hong Kong and Hawaii.

A teacher at Northeastern Junior High in Somerville, John Guinee has a son David Vincent entering the School of Education at the Heights this fall.

Major John Keohane always one of the most popular members of the class, is serving as Chaplain at Blytherville Air Force Base, Arkansas.

Paul O'Neal sends word that he is with the Plastics Division at Union Carbide and is living in Darien, Connecticut.

Capt. Thomas J. Gallagher, Jr., U.S.N. is commanding officer of the USS Princeton involved in the Viet Nam war. Captain Gallagher's ship was one casualty evacuation control ship during action around Chu Lai during October 1965.

Frank O'Neill, owner of O'Neill's Grocery & Liquor store in San Francisco, has been elected the President of the B.C. Club of Northern California.

Martin Carew, Jr., Assistant Manager of the Boylston St., Boston office of Hornblower & Weeks, Memphis, Noyes recently returned from a series of Resident Management Seminars held at the firm's New York Headquarters.

President Johnson has promoted Albert V. Nyren to Class 2 in the Foreign Service of the United States. The promotion resulted from a recommendation by the 1966 Foreign Service Selection Service Board.

JACOB SANTAMARIA, A&S

We wish to extend our sympathy to John Loscocco on the recent death of his father . . . Joseph Canelliere was one of 375 delegates on hand for the inaugural ceremonies at Springfield College inducting Wilbert E. Locklin as the new President . . . Joe lives in Agawam and brings much credit to B.C. in that area . . . We heard from Paul Marble and her Barbara and their three boys and four girls live in Schenectady where Paul is in the Automobile business. Paul went to Holy Cross from B.C. in Navy Program and also Supply School at Wellesley College. He served in Pacific during WW-II and later the Korean Conflict. Paul is a great football fan and has been interesting talent from his section in B.C. . . . Joe Curry who was sent to Tufts in Navy and finished College at that school is living in Manchester, N.H. He and Patricia have five children. Joe was on active duty with Navy for about ten years and is currently purchasing agent for Ammon Instruments having also been with North-west Airlines and Honeywell . . . Mike Kenn is living in New Rochelle, N.Y. One of his seven children is at Fordham Prep . . . Mike left us for the Navy. He is currently a Navy Reserve Commander having switched from Supply to Naval Intelligence after going into Law. Mike graduated from Georgetown Law in 1948 and stayed on for a Masters in Taxation. He first went to New York as special trial counsel in the Internal Revenue Service. In 1952 he went into his own private practice favoring corporate and estate tax work. When not in the Tax Court or pursuing fraud cases Mike busies himself on the Boards of a few small but upcoming corporations. During the summer months we had a few good nights and days at Harwichport.

Dave Carey and Eve were up from Connecticut . . . I found Dave sipping and splashing and babysitting at the Wychmere Harbor Club pool . . . Dave is one of our younger classmates and loves activity. Bill O'Sullivan and Mary, Dave and Eve, Ed Finigan and your correspondent made plans for Navy game. Fr. Pat Kelly who is a Lieut. Commander in Navy Chaplain Corps will be on active duty for two weeks in Annapolis area at time of football game but will sit on B.C. side of field of course. Jim and Catherine Lillis and nine children whom I reported on recently are living in Falls Church, Virginia and Jim is retiring as Comdr. from Navy. Jim tells me that a short time ago he met T. X. Cronin while on a flying trip between Boston and New York (at a shoe shine booth). We have good living classmates. In twenty-four years Jim has had a most varied and interesting experience (besides bringing up nine children). From B.C. Jim went to Dartmouth . . . Tuck School of Business and also Harvard Supply School. He did Masters work at George Washington Univ. and attended the Navy Justice School. He is a member of National Security Industrial Association and the National Defense Transportation Association. He has served as Asst. Supply Officer at Naval Supply Depots at New Hebrides, Samar, Philippines (I can verify that one) Bainbridge, Maryland, Naval Air Station, Key West, Florida; Naval Shipyard, Boston; Supply Officer of Destroyer Escort U.S.S. Basitone; Submarine Tender USS Fulton; USS Norfolk; Commanding Officer of Cargo Handling Battalion No. 5 in Cuba and Argentina; Asst. Chief for Publication and Technical Information, Bureau Supplies and Accounts, Washington D.C.; Director of Logistic Division and Support Division, Bureau of Ships, Wash., D.C. Jim while doing all this just kept gaining weight and having nine children and is still as pleasant and as industrious as always and we wish him much good fortune in his civilian career also. Come to think of it where did he find time to go into a shoe shine booth. We anticipate that Lou Sorgi will be soon calling together the class Standing Committee to blueprint a three-year plan leading up to our 25th Anniversary year. Tom Loftus was on west coast this summer doing some graduate teacher work . . . at least that was the reason he gave. Bill Hamrock is back in Massachusetts with American Optical and was taking on all comers this summer at New Seabury Golf Course. One of our long range plans for 1970 is to compile a Class directory so if we have been out of touch please drop me a line so we can include everyone . . . as you know our wartime class was short lived and we want to include all members of our original freshman class.

Vacation over, kids back to school, the wife busy with fall housecleaning—plenty of time now to drop a line. Who knows, maybe some of your old pals will send you a Christmas card.

Joe Lambé is enjoying his new home, with a view of the Rockies, out in Denver. As Branch Manager for Continental National American Group, he had previously been located in San Francisco, Portland, Oregon and Seattle with his wife and two sons. Good to hear from you, Joe.

Another new home owner is Jack Harvey in Belmont. The continuing face lifting of Greater Boston has a new highway where Jack used to mow his lawn. As an Attorney, Register of Probate in Middlesex County (an elective office) and golfer, Jack is in the top echelon.

Enjoying the Autumn leaves in Suburbia is Father Al Campbell, who is located at St. Mary's Parish in Billerica after twelve years in Charlestown. Life must be relatively quiet for Father Al after all those Urban Renewal battles.

It necessitated moving his family from Chicago . . . Charlie Burns occupies the Principal's Office at Keene High School, Keene, N.H. . . Busy in the Ol' Whaling Town of New Bedford is Dr. Bill Downey. A year or so back, Dr. Bob Fitzgerald completed twenty years in the Naval Reserve. He now gives full time to "keepin' 'em smilin'" in Needham except for a round of golf here and there . . . A fellow classmate who never left the books is Paul Moynihan, Librarian at our Alma Mater . . . Remember what a lively personality Dr. John Murphy had at the Heights? He's now putting people to sleep as an Anesthesiologist at the Memorial Hospital, Worcester, Mass.

A local sports writer occasionally has a column which leads off "Right or wrong the readers write". I hope I can do likewise.

Charlie Rogers has been appointed Chief of Information for the Department of Interior's Federal Water Pollution Control Administration. Charlie, his wife and seven children live in Norbeck, Maryland. John O'Connor has been named director-commercial sales in Boston Gas Company's New Construction & Volume Sales Department.

L.B.J. and the Nugents, in the Society Wedding of the year, had nothing compared to the swinging social set at Alumni Hall on May 15, 1966. This was the annual Reunion Dance of the best class to ever leave the hallowed portals at Chestnut Hill (for those who missed the gala, the class I am talking about is ours '53). There were many old buddies and gals, thin ones, fat ones, bald and grey haired old men and women, who had the time of their lives reminiscing of the good old days and catching up to date with their long missed classmates; to give you, who missed, an idea of a few who attended: Let's see, there were the "twosomes" of Mr. and Mrs. William Mahoney, William Thalcher, Ed Hanlon, Lawrence J. Costello, William J. Doherty, Paul Flynn, James Low, Jr., Lawrence Maloney, Joseph O'Brien, Jim Lynch, Frederick L. Good, Charles F. Butler, Robert W. Kelly, William L. McSweeney, Jr., William P. Kenny, Tom McGinnis, John W. O'Gorman, Robert D. Sullivan, Paul D. Coughlin, Robert Brawley, John L. McCauley, Robert Grant, Joseph F. Tower, Jr., John Cullinan, Austin L. Smith, Robert J. Roach, Richard Horan, John F. O'Neil, John Crawford, Duane L. O'Doherty, Charles B. Powers, Robert Irons, John Lynch, Paul Flaherty, Richard F. Power, John J.

Meaney, Walter Corcoran, Thomas Mullen, Arthur J. Leary, Leo F. Grace, James J. Livingston, Jerry Toomey, W. J. Duggan, A. E. Sullivan and Fr. Lawrence J. Drennan stopped in to say hello to everybody. Those are just to name a few, some of the '53 swingers who we can remember that attended. If we have missed you, drop us a note.

Teresa Harney from Paxton, Mass., was a delegate to the American Nurses Association who held their convention in San Francisco last June. Teresa is head nurse at St. Vincent's Hospital in Worcester and from the way she was dancing she must also, have a job on the side with Arthur Murray. Bill McSweeney and his wife came in from Long Island, N.Y. and Bill, you looked real sharp in your light blue blazer. Fr. John Lepone is now a Chaplain in the Navy. George M. Sullivan is Executive Director for the United Community Services of Jackson County, Jackson, Mich., and he sends his hello to all.

Kevin and Shirley Gallimore who are in Mattoon, Illinois sent their best to the class.

It was impossible for Pat and Esther Cacace to attend as Pat had just returned from Viet Nam and had used his leave time; for those who wish to write Pat and Esther: Major P. L. Cacace, Box 505-D, Rt. 3, Stafford, Va.

Rev. Neil P. O'Keefe, S.J. was ordained June 12 and celebrated his first Mass at St. Ignatius' Church June 19th.

Jack Connelly was unable to attend but dropped us a nice note from California, expects to get some Shore Duty in New Orleans for the next two years. (Some life, Jack!)

Bob Waldron wrote from Pope John XXIII National Seminary in Weston and although Bob would like to attend, the rector feels that such things as dancing will have to wait for Vatican III.

Camille A. Gagnon (alias Sister Mary Camillus, S.P.) has been a Sister of Providence for the last ten years and sends her prayers and best wishes.

James F. Welch was named manager of finance and administration for the General Electric Company's Industrial Drives Systems & Sales Engineering Operation based in Schenectady, New York.

Captain Paul F. Lockery received the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal for meritorious service as a member of a Strategic Air Command Crew at Pease AFB, N.H.

Congratulations to Jim Lynch on the birth of his fifth child, a daughter. The Lynch household now has a "full house": two Jacks and three Queens.

Congratulations are in order for Marion Wieners of the Graduate Nurse Section of our class. She was married to John Malinowski in June and is currently residing in Stoneham. May you enjoy a happy and blessed life together . . . We hear Mary Rose Griffin and her family have returned to Massachusetts and are again living in Belmont . . . Your Nursing School correspondent almost visited several classmates in California. I was in Hawaii during the airline strike and, on arrival back in California, actually picked up the phone book but I became lucky and got a flight home . . . An up to date class list is available for the Basic Nursing Section. If you want one let me know.

At a luncheon meeting of the Boston College Club of Worcester, Bob Trevisani turned up. He is working for the law firm of Seder and Seder, and living in the Central Massachusetts city. After many years in the management consultant field, Paul Croke is leaving to go back to college. He will start working on his Ph.D. in management at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., starting this Fall. Frank Tannian has left Duquesne University, and has been appointed to the faculty of the University of Delaware's Economic Department at the Newark campus. J. T. McDonough is teaching Classics at St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, Pa.

There have been a few comments that the Class of 1955 notes have not contained much information on more members of our class. How about sending a post card, or letter, letting us know where you are, and what you are doing these days. All information concerning graduates of A&S and CBA should be sent to Phil Doherty at the above address.

We are pleased to report a grand response by the Class of 1956 to our 10th Anniversary Celebration held in conjunction with Alumni Week-End Activities in June of this year. Hopefully, this magnificent turnout will augur well for all future Class activities.

CATERERS TO ALUMNI HALL

Folan and spouse, all the way up from Virginia, the Tom Hegarty's of Somerville, Tony Solomita and his wife, our Portland, Me. representatives, Paul Weyand and Jim Shea, with respective mates, John Scannell and wife from Arlington, Leo Powers and his Mrs., Brian and Rose Ann Concannon, now of Marshfield, Anne Sweeney Donovan and her husband Jim, who did his undergraduate work up on Mount St. James, but saw the light thereafter and pursued an MBA at the Heights, Butch Curry and his wife from Medfield — Butch is a sales representative for Simplex Wire and Cable Co. — Bob Caffrey and spouse, who now hail from Rockland, Mass., Bob Jennings and Pauline from Dorchester, George Baierlein and his wife from Needham, — and many, many others. Of course, "John Barleycorn" was present, as usual, and in his inimitable manner he loosened tongues, not characteristically garrulous, and prompted some Charlestons and Hully-Gully's by some otherwise hesitant legs. His contributions to the Week-End were marked, as per usual, by the presence of intolerable pain in the region of the parietal bone of the skull on Saturday and Sunday mornings, more commonly referred to as "hang-over". — but all in attendance it was worth it.

Art Reilly now the proud father of a son, (whose photograph appeared in the Traveler as "Baby of the Day"), Christening was by Father Frank Strahan. Art is on the Board of Government of the Alumni Sodality, and is employed by the Boston Redevelopment Authority as a Development Specialist.

Ed McDermott is practicing law in Hampton, New Hampshire. He married a New Hampshire native, Nan, and they presently reside at Hobbs Road in Hampton, N. H.

Bill Connell, CBA, makes his home on Albermarle Rd., Newton, Mass., with his wife, the former Agnes Hannan of Brighton, and their four children. Bill is in Computer Sales with Honeywell, Inc. in their Wellesley, Mass. EDP Division. Following graduation with an ROTC Commission, Bill spent a year or so with Uncle Sam's forces in Europe in close proximity to the Iron Curtain.

John Folan, one of our more long-legged brethren, originally hailing from Norwood, Mass., now resides in Fredericksburg, Virginia, where he is engaged in the insurance business. John and Mrs. Folan have accounted for four additions to Clan Folan. John will be remembered as one of our more consistent middle-distance track performers. Prior to entering the insurance industry, John spent a few years before the mast as a Naval officer.

Jim Shea, an old Somerville, now calls home — Heather Road, Portland, Maine, where he resides with his wife and five children. Jim, one of our more able classics scholars, is using his linguistic talents, augmented by an Economics major, to advance the cause of Henry Ford and his Motor Company in the Northern-most reaches of New England. Prior to enhancing the Ford Motor Company, Jim served a hitch with the Marines as a Lieutenant. Jim reports that his kids were born in 5 different states of our Union and, understandably, in the face of this record, he and his wife look somewhat apprehensively upon any further interstate moves.

Living across the street from Jim in Portland is Paul Weyand and his family, currently numbering four. Paul is a sales representative for a paper products company. Paul served as a Supply Officer in the Navy and, like Jim, his children can claim several different states as their native ground. Paul and Jim are both B. C. High grads, to add yet another touch to their similar histories.

We had a letter recently from the sister of John P. Kane, one of our physicists in '67. She advised that John went on to West Point after B. C. and is presently a Captain in the Signal Corps of the Army, stationed in Viet Nam. Certainly in such a forlorn place he would welcome some mail from former classmates. A letter can find him care of the following address:

Captain John P. Kane, 090897
Hd. Qtrs. — 2nd Signal Group
APO 96307, San Francisco, California

Bill Toomey of 1422 Stacegoach Drive, Richardson, Texas wrote in recently to acknowledge the propagatory efforts of classmates, reported in the last edition of this journal as members of the 'Parents of Six Club'. He allowed as though he and his wife, Pat, could not apply for membership however, in so far as they have excluded themselves by reason of the advent of their seventh child. Five of the Toomey children attend St. Paul The Apostle Grammar School in Richardson. Bill is employed with Texas Instruments, Inc., in their Semi-Conductor Division.

It would appear that several Eagles out of our class have seen fit to perch or roost on Texas soil. To name but a few, Bill Toomey, Jim King, Bernie Hill. Appears like he have the nucleus of a Texas B. C. Club if they can ever get together across that much-talked about wide-expanse. Perhaps, they might meet and take a cruise up the Perdolenas River on a bird watching expedition.

Rev. Larry (Red) Lennon, formerly from Brighton, reports that he is currently assigned to the Cathedral Parish in Manchester, New Hampshire. His summer duties take him to St. Patrick's Church at Hampton Beach, where he would welcome classmates who might be on vacation in the area. Prior to his present assignment Father Larry had been stationed in Berlin, New Hampshire, where, amongst other duties, he was a teacher-coach at Notre Dame High School, which would ring familiar with high school hockey fans. Father Larry reported that another classmate, John Murphy, out of Woburn, is now Father Jude, OFM. Father Jude was stationed at the Arch Street Shrine in Boston a while back, and, more recently he has been assigned to the faculty at St. Bonaventure's College in upper New York State. Another classmate, whom Father Larry mentioned, was Vinny Duran, originally from this correspondent's bailiwick in West Roxbury. Vin was principal of Groveton New Hampshire, High School. Lately Vinny has undertaken a new assignment as principal of a new high school in Vermont.

Attorney Brian Concannon is Chairman of the Marshfield (Mass.) Permanent School Building Committee. Brian, incidentally, is a Special Assistant Attorney General for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and recently argued the so-called 'Small Loan Company Cases' before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where he won a favorable decision. The Circuit Court of Appeals, for those who mightn't be acquainted, is one level below the U.S. Supreme Court, the major leagues so to speak, of the legal profession. Brian reports that on a recent trip to Washington, D.C., he was the guest of Gerry and Carol Devlin. Gerry is Administrative Assistant to Congressman Daniel of New Jersey and the Chairman of the Supervisors of Elections of Prince George's County, Maryland.

Dr. Eugene McCarthy, serving on the faculty at Columbia University Medical School, was the recent recipient of a substantial Federal Government grant to conduct a study of the impact of Medicare upon the practice of medicine in the United States. Gene and Gerry Devlin, incidentally, are cousins.

Another one of our doctors, George Bernier, is living at 3235 Sycamore Road, Cleveland Heights, Ohio. George is an instructor in Medicine at Western Reserve University School of Medicine and an Assistant Physician at University Hospitals of Cleveland. George's primary duties involve him in teaching and research in the area of protein biochemistry. He and his wife have two children, George III and Elizabeth, the latter having arrived on June 15, 1966.

Leo F. Power, of the famous basketball-Player clan and a mathematician, is now living in Framingham with his wife, the former Kathleen A. Sullivan of Newton, and their son and two daughters. Leo is the Assistant Director of the Research and Analysis Laboratory at B.C. He holds an M.A. in Math from B.C. and is currently a candidate for an M.B.A. degree from B.C. also. In the interim between graduation and graduate school, Leo spent three years as a Naval Officer, two of them cruising the Pacific and the third as an instructor at O.C.S. in Newport.

We are advised that another one of our mathematicians, C. Norman Canning, passed away in September of 1965. Norm's premature death came, unfortunately at a pinnacle in his career, after he had just been appointed Director of the Computer Center at Holy Cross. To his wife and three daughters, we convey our most profound sympathy and assurance that Norm, together with other deceased members of our class, will always be remembered in our prayers. Requested in pace.

Bob Ricci has been promoted to Associate Professor at Holy Cross College. Jack Foley has joined Converse Rubber Company, Malden, as manager of the Data Processing Department. He was employed previously as systems analyst and programmer with Itek Corporation. Vyto Savickis has recently moved into a new home in Foxboro with his wife Sheila and first child, a son, Joseph Justin. Vyto is presently New England District Sales Manager for In-Sink Erator Mfg. Co. of Racine, Wis. Jack McIntosh has joined the Mitre Corporation's Technical Operations. Jack Moloney has been elected Assistant Treasurer of the State Street Bank and Trust Company, Boston, and Jim Lordan to Assistant Vice President.

The girls from the School of Nursing had a grand time at the reunion. Everyone that attended had a very enjoyable evening rehashing old times looking at school pictures, and talking about their families. During the evening the following news worthy items were gathered.

Janet (Doherty) Roes husband, Tom has recently joined forces with the Internal Revenue Service. Good luck on your new job. The IRS is lucky to have you.

Congratulations and best wishes to Sue (Larcou) and Ed McFoul on the occasion of their marriage on July 16th. They left for a two week Caribbean cruise and following the honeymoon they will reside at 76 DeHaven Dr., Yonkers, New York, Apt. 3A. By the way Ed is also a B.C. Alum.

Anne (Hall) and Joe O'Brien have recently moved to a new home in Lancaster, Mass. It is an historical 17 room house. We do not envy you Anne when it comes time to clean.

Carol (Harnbeck) Rennie and family were recently vacationing at the home of her parents in Arlington. John, a graduate of Annapolis has been stationed in Maryland for the past couple of years.

A Master's degree from Boston College School of Business Administration was awarded on June 15th to Bob Dill. Bob is the husband of Alice Marie Kearney and is employed at Digital Equipment Corporation.

Some well-remembered classmates who couldn't attend the party, but sent greetings included Esta Keefe, married and living in Nevada, who wrote a very typical note saying she, "... didn't think she could make it"; Anna Wall, also married and living in Hawaii; and Macy Finn Doherty, now the mother of seven children! We thought she must surely be the most prolific of the class until we learned of the birth of Justin Xavier in July to Helen King Kennedy and Bill, bringing their number of offspring to seven also!

Gerard and Joan O'Leary Shaw of Hingham now have four children with the recent arrival of Sarah. Mary Byrne Collins and Tom have a new son, and Jack Foley of Malden is King of the House with his four daughters. Jack is employed at Converse Rubber Co., in Data Processing. Jim Bryant, principal at Stoughton, and his wife are beaming with the news of their first adopted daughter. Anne Gallo is married and living in Mystic, Conn., where she and her husband have three children. Claire Hoban McCormack lives near by in West Roxbury with her spouse and three youngsters. Elaine Maher Driscoll, with two youngsters in school, is teaching in Dorchester. Peter Paglari is touring with his travel agency during the summer months. Frank O'Regan is in Guidance at King Philip in Wrentham, and told us that Clovis Proulx would soon be returning from Viet Nam. Capt. Bob Cahalane, father of four sons, is on his way there, and we wish him Godspeed. Bob Eagle is at Waltham in Guidance, as is Claire Cunningham. Mary Frazier Pizzelli has been running a nursery school in Hingham. Anne Carroll Bean is teaching in Medford, and has two children. Pat McHugh Hadley and family have moved to New Jersey where Joe has received a promotion. Kathy Gosselin Wingstead and Walter now reside in Worcester, Mass., with their three children. Mary Ann Tierney Powers of the No. Shore is teaching and has three youngsters. Also seen at the party were Connie Regolino, Barbara Higgins, Betty Wilson and Betty Ann Casey. It was so good to see Nancy Moran, Anne Gilligan of Needham, and Nancy Nangle of Hull, even though I must confess to loss of memory concerning their marriage names. Don O'Hanley was up from Newport, R.I., with the latest in Stock Market tips, and from Concord came Denise McCabe Igo. Carolyn Kenney Foley and Janet Corcoran, now married, were chatting with old friends, and everyone agreed on, "... why don't we do this more often?"

The reunion in June brought many of us back together again including Tom Magarelli Reis and his Mrs. Tom is coaching at Westwood High; Anne Maguire Finnegan and Dave, who came from Virginia; and Anne Sullivan Glennon and John, the parents of a new son, and residents of Maryland. Dotty McCauley Flood and Frank were among many of us chatting with Fr. Jim Casey of Theology fame, who was on his way to the Middle East. So wonderful to see you again, Father, and God bless! Loretta Ballou Westerhoff and Frank drove up from So. Dennis, where Frank is a contractor. Many of the "old faithfuls" were there, of course, including the Mert Thompsons of Natick, Dick and Carol Hines Gleason of Wellesley, Dick and Lou Burke Toland of Rosindale, Janet Ohrenberger McCarthy and Walter of No. Scituate, the Bob Goudies of Norwell, Bucky and Ann Sweeney Donovan of Norwood, Margie Murphy of Milton, Alice Shea, Mal Roberts O'Neil and Barry of No. Scituate, Ed and Beverley Ross Fox of Sharon, Marie Burke and her husband, and Joan Carroll Donovan and Walter of Sharon. Marie McCormack Jacobsen came up from Miami to attend the Communion Breakfast on Sunday. Joan Nobis, whose husband is serving in Viet Nam, arrived from the Midwest, and from Maryland came Margie Callahan Cammarato and Tony. Elaine Evans, whose husband teaches at Williams, now lives in No. Adams. Finally, it was great to say, "Hi" to Marion Febo, Lolly Condon and Ed Cook.

The Business and Academic Worlds are not so far apart as many people would like to believe — for upon both fall the responsibilities of sustaining the growth of the Community.

It is wrong to think that education ceases when a person graduates. He has completed the formal preparation, to be sure; but an educated man is one who continues to grow and to share his knowledge with others.

Many Boston College men in our organization have shown their dedication to the principles of education through service to their Company, their Community and their College. These are activities worthy of every alumnus of every college.
